THE LAW OF BANKRUPTCY; being an Adaptation of the Chapter on Bankruptcy in the Twelfth Edition of SELWYN'S NISI PRIUS to the Present Law. With considerable Additions and Alterations. By DAVID POWER, Esq., Q. C., Recorder of Ipswich, and F. S. P. WOLFERSTAN, Esq., Barrister at Law.

Contents.—Principal Headings: Of the Court of Bankruptcy—Of Persons liable to be Bankrupts—Of the several Acts of Bankruptcy—Of the Petitioning Creditor's Debt—Of the Property of the Bankrupt, what passes to Assignees—Of Property in the Possession of the Bankrupt as reputed Owner—Of Transactions not affected by Bankruptcy—Of Warrants of Attorney, Cognovits, Judges' Orders, and Bills of Sale—Of Actions by Assignees—Of Actions against Assignees—Of Actions by and against the Bankrupt—Of the Order of Discharge—Of the Pleadings—Of the Evidence—Of the Suspension of Proceedings, Change from Bankruptcy to Arrangement, and Composition Deals.

A few words will explain the object of the present treatise. It is intended to replace the present chapter on Bankruptcy in the twelfth edition of Selwyn's Abridgment of the Law of Nisi Prius. To those who have purchased that work, it will be in the nature of a supplemental chapter on Bankruptcy, with the law adapted to the recent changes; and, having been paged uniformly with that work, it may be at once substituted for the old chapter on Bankruptcy in it. The Index, Table of Cases, and Table of Statutes, which will be found in the Appendix, and which have been altered to correspond with the new matter introduced, may be substituted in a similar manner. By others who may buy this work as a separate treatise, it will be found, it is hoped, a correct summary of the Law of Bankruptcy, with reference mainly to questions that arise upon it in actions at law. With the view of rendering it more complete, a short account of the origin, &c. of the Court of Bankruptcy has been prefixed; and considerable alterations and additions have been made to the old chapter on Bankruptcy in Selwyn's Nisi Prius, both in matter and arrangement.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, DECEMBER 28, 1861.

THE answer of the Government of the United States of America to the demand of the British Government for explanation of, or apology for, the boarding, by the United States frigate San Jacinto, of the British mail steamer Trent, and capture from her of Messrs. Mason and Slidell, commissioners from the Confederate States of North America to two of the European Powers, may very soon be expected—an answer which probably will determine the important question whether there is to be peace or war between Great Britain and the United States. The legality of that act has been the subject of continual discussion ever since the news of the event arrived in this country, and has been made the subject of great and angry comment. We have forbore, and shall continue to forbear, entering into that question until the answer of the American Government arrives; and this for the simple reason, that we have not at present before us any admitted state of facts on which to form a judgment. The observation of Mr. Justice Blackstone, that the law rarely hesitates in declaring its own meaning, and that the immense majority of cases litigated in courts of justice are wholly or principally disputes respecting facts, holds with equal force in international as in municipal law. Indeed, it applies with even greater force in the former, because, in an ordinary law-suit, if the litigant parties differ upon the facts, there is an authoritative means of deciding them; whereas, in the latter, each of the contending Governments determines the facts as it best may, without the control of any superior; and has too often to discharge this duty amid a storm of misrepresentation, prejudice, and passion which renders calm reasoning difficult, if not impossible.

The present case forms a good illustration. An account reaches this country that the British flag has been insulted, by a British steamer having been boarded by an American frigate, and two gentlemen forcibly taken out of her, who were avowedly proceeding to Europe with the view of inducing the British and French Governments to recognise the independence of the Confederate States of North America—which the Government of the United States resolutely denies, and is now engaged in a desperate war with those States to suppress. To this complaint is added, that the manner of doing the act was at variance with the custom of nations, in this—that the frigate, instead of firing a gun with blank cartridge, to induce The Trent to bring to, fired a shotted gun and a loaded shell across her bows. On the receipt of this intelligence, the British Government, in the discharge of its duty, demands explanation, and, if necessary, satisfaction; and, until an answer is received to that demand, it is impossible to predict either peace or war. Several courses are open to the American Government. First, they may disavow the act of their officer, and make the amende honorable. Secondly, supposing they justify the act of their officer, they may do so on many different grounds. We observe that that officer, in an official report made by him to his superiors, has justified the act on the ground that The Trent, a vessel belonging to a neutral State, was carrying “despatches” for the Confederate Government. Such an act is, generally speaking, a violation of international law, where the war is between two independent nations; but if the fact stated by the American captain be true, the question would arise, whether the circumstance of England not having formally recognised the independence of the Confederate States makes any difference in this respect. On the important question—was The Trent really carrying such despatches?—some colour is given to the statement by this—that in the first account of the transaction that reached this country it was stated, with apparent satisfaction, that the despatches had escaped capture. Again: supposing The Trent was carrying despatches, did that justify the forcible removal of those particular persons from her, or was the capture and condemnation of the ship as prize the only legitimate consequence of such misconduct? But, on the other hand, suppose the charge against The Trent of carrying despatches turns out to be unfounded, then comes the question, whether the frigate had a right to search a neutral vessel, and take American citizens out of her—a question which throws open the old and much-disputed one of the right of search at sea; and, supposing the affirmative, involves the other one, whether the Government of this country has in any way recognised the existence of the Confederate States as independent of the United States. And, after all, it is possible that the American Government may not take any of these grounds of defence, but justify the conduct of its officer on some other grounds, with which we are at present unacquainted.

With respect to the additional question—the manner in which the act was done—the solution of it depends, we apprehend, on the solution of the previous question, whether the act was justifiable at all. The firing an unshotted gun is undoubtedly one mode of bringing a vessel to at sea; but the firing a shotted gun across her bows, or “à boulet perdu,” is another, and we apprehend by no means uncommon one in time of war; and which of these is the proper course to adopt in any particular instance depends on circumstances. If, however, the American Government should be of opinion that the act of their officer was justifiable in itself, but that the manner of doing it was in this particular respect indefensible, we make no doubt that they will acknowledge it, and offer any expiation which the law of nations requires.

We confess we look for a pacific issue to this dispute, if the question is to be decided by law and reason. But we fear that the very different agents of interest and passion are more likely to be listened to. There are large classes in this country whose personal interests would be greatly promoted by a war with the United States. Chief among these are all persons who are involved in any way with the cotton trade. The Government of the United States, in the exercise of an undoubted right possessed by every belligerent who is strong enough to enforce it, has established a blockade of the ports of the Confederate States, from whence so large a portion of the cotton imported into England is derived. The existence of that blockade is consequently a source of loss, and even distress, to many; who cannot help seeing, that in the event of a war with the United States, Great Britain would at once disown the blockade, and perhaps take forcible measures for putting an end to it. Besides, ever since the receipt of the news relative to the boarding of The Trent by The San Jacinto, the affair has been, we will not say discussed, but commented on, by the press of this country (with some honourable exceptions), in a manner calculated to promote anything but peace. Incessant arguments on the subject, full of misstatements of the law of nations, which, under ordinary circumstances, would be ludicrous, together with language of the most violent and exasperating character directed against the Government and people of the United States, form the staple of each impression. The consequence of these two causes, and perhaps others, has been, that a general war fever has taken possession of the country.

The views of our own Government on this subject we of course do not know; but if (which perhaps, however, it is scarcely fair to do) we may judge by the language held by the papers commonly supposed to be in their confidence, they are as deeply smitten with the war fever as others. On the other side of the water, the American people appear to have received the news of the boarding of The Trent by the San Jacinto with acclamation, and commented upon it with that spirit of braggadocio and rhodomontade which disfigures the national character of a people great in many respects. An honourable exception is, indeed, seen in the person of their chief. The President of the United States, in his recent Message to Congress, not only makes no mention of the affair of The Trent, but refers to the case of another British ship, The Perthshire, which was captured under the erroneous impression that she intended to run the blockade; and with the straightforwardness and magnanimity becoming the governor of a great nation, acknowledges that the officer who captured that vessel was in the wrong, and that proper compensation ought to be made to its owners.

With these observations, we will dismiss the subject until the arrival of the answer of the Government of the United States, when we will immediately proceed to an examination of any questions of international law to which it may give rise.

SUCCESSION DUTY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—I had intended to address to you some remarks with reference to the cases which have been decided on the Succession Duty Act, but your editorial strictures have anticipated the fulfilment of my purpose. I should have urged (much less forcibly than your able pen has demonstrated) the almost insurmountable difficulties attendant upon the interpretation of the spirit and letter of an act, the idea or conception and legislative expression of which are so eminently abstruse.

Permit me, Sir, only to add, with reference to the case of In re Barker et ux., that Baron Bramwell might well decline to give his sanction to that decision, in view of the very elaborate judgment which he delivered as the unanimous judgment of the Court in the case of The Attorney-General v. Floyer and Seymour, reported in the same number. That was a case of a recovery by tenant for life (Henry Barker) and tenant in tail male (William John Bankes), creating in them a joint power of appointment which had been exercised, and under which exercise the Hon. George Bankes took a life estate. The learned Baron says, "George might indeed have had such an estate tail (i. e. wholly derived from William John) had the joint power of appointment not been exercised;" and in another place, "Let it be tried thus:—Suppose the recovery had been to the use of the father Henry for life, remainder to William John in fee, or to such uses as he should appoint, and then he had appointed to the uses of the deed of 1821, subsequent to the life estate of the father, would not the interest be derived from him (i. e. William John)? Clearly." Now, these remarks have no meaning, unless they mean that if, after the recovery which was suffered by Henry, tenant for life, and William John, tenant in tail male, to such uses as they should jointly appoint, and subject thereto to the use of Henry for life, with remainder to such uses as William John should appoint, and subject thereto to the uses of the grandfather's will (under which, after the death of William John without issue male, George took an estate tail), no appointment had been made, George would have taken an estate tail from William John only, but, as the joint power was executed, the joint appointors became the predecessors of the estate for life appointed to George.

In re Ramsay, reported in THE JURIST of to-day, contains, as it appears to me, judicial remarks quite inconsistent with and opposed to the decision in Re Barker et ux. The Master of the Rolls says, in a very lucid and forcible judgment, "If, indeed, this 10,000*l.* had been settled to such uses as Lady Ramsay, notwithstanding coverture, should by deed or will have appointed, and in default of appointment to the children of the marriage, and so on, according to the trusts therein contained, and if Lady Ramsay had ex*ercised that power, and the petitioners had taken as appointees from her, and not under the ultimate trusts of the settlement, then I should have been of opinion that she would have been the predecessor;*" and in another part of the same judgment the learned judge says that no distinction can be drawn between a settlement of a charge on the estate and a settlement of the estate itself.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

THE TRENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—There are two points arising out of the capture of Messrs. Mason and Slidell which appear to me to have been slurred over in the politico-legal discussions of the newspapers.

1. Mason and Slidell, and their secretaries, were not seized as contraband, but taken as prisoners of war. Contraband means property—goods imported contrary to customs laws. Contraband of war means goods directly available for war purposes, and, therefore, liable to be seized by one belligerent if intended for the other. Carrying such goods, works, in certain cases, confiscation of the vessel carrying, and even of her other cargo. "Of the same nature with the carrying of contraband goods is the transportation of military persons, or despatches, in the service of the enemy" (Wheaton); i. e. the carrying in this case usually, as in the other case occasionally, makes the vessel good prize. But persons cannot be contraband, and consequently some of the reasoning applicable to the latter fails as regards the former. The books hardly deal with such cases as a bare capture of persons: the tenor of the discussions is on the consequences to vessels carrying such goods or persons. The proper question to raise here is, is it a violation of neutral rights to capture on board a neutral merchant vessel inchoate ambassadors or quasi ambassadors? On neutral territory no act of war may be committed; but on neutral merchant vessels we may seize, first, enemy goods; secondly, contraband of war; thirdly, enemy persons, being belligerents; and, fourthly, enemy despatches, with the exception of those from an ambassador recognised and resident in a neutral country. Can it be a grave violation of international law to seize persons notoriously engaged in the public service of a belligerent?

2. How can a prize court have jurisdiction in this case? Prisoners of war are not prize. Moreover, prize courts have for their especial functions to pass the right of property by decisions in rem. But it is not held that their decisions conclude the matter as between States. They are not tribunals of arbitration between monarchs, but domestic tribunals to inquire into the validity of capture of goods and vessels, before the sovereign assigns them as prize to her successful cruisers. In what way would the libel be drawn in the present case?

If it be said that you cannot seize persons except you seize the vessels also, England cannot stop here: it would be intolerable to have mail steamers taken into port, and detained there for weeks with the chance of ultimate condemnation. And it is strange not to permit a nation to claim belligerents, or quasi belligerents, as prisoners of war, unless they claim also the confiscation of the vessel and cargo.

If these points should seem to you worth notice, I should be glad of seeing some elucidation of what appear to me real difficulties.

I am, your constant reader,
Dec. 16, 1861. H. J. R.

ALLOWANCE TO PROSECUTORS AND WITNESSES IN CRIMINAL CASES.

WINTER ASSIZES, YORK.—Dec. 14.

[Coram WIGHTMAN, J.]

AFTER all the bills had been presented to the grand jury,

Sir J. V. B. Johnstone, the foreman of the jury, addressing his Lordship, said he would take the liberty of presenting a memorial from the grand jury, which was couched in similar terms to the one which had already been presented in that court on a former occasion, relative to the inadequacy of the remuneration allowed to witnesses, both at assizes and quarter sessions, which often prevented justice being done, and witnesses from coming to give evidence. It was the opinion of the grand jury that the allowance was insufficient in a great many cases, and led to a failure of justice.

The memorial was then handed to his Lordship, and the following is a copy of it:—

"The grand jury for the county of York, at the winter gaol delivery in December, 1861, desire most respectfully to call the attention of the Hon. Mr. Justice Wightman to the scale of allowances to prosecutors and witnesses in criminal cases at assizes and quarter sessions, as being quite insufficient adequately to remunerate those in the humbler walks of life, who are necessarily called away from their families and ordinary occupations, for their expenses and loss of time, by which last expression the grand jury understand the stats. 9 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 22, and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 55, to mean the reasonable allowance for the loss of their wages during the time such witnesses are necessarily absent from their homes and their work. Those of the grand jury who are acting justices are not unfrequently very much embarrassed by the extreme reluctance of material witnesses to come forward to prosecute and give evidence in criminal cases of the gravest kind, as well as in all other cases likely to be sent for trial at assizes and quarter sessions. The grand jury are of opinion that justice is greatly impeded, and in many cases defeated, by the inadequate remuneration awarded under the present scale of allowances.

"J. V. B. JOHNSTONE, Foreman."

His Lordship, having informed the grand jury that their memorial should be forwarded to the proper quarter, discharged them in the usual terms.

To this the reporter of The Times appends the following note:—

"Another step dictated by the spirit of economy has been taken in a number of instances at these assizes. It frequently happens that, when some daring ruffian or expert thief has been apprehended, two or three charges are brought against him before the magistrates, who, in the exercise of the important public duty imposed upon them, hear the evidence in support of these accusations, and if the charges are such as they have not the power summarily to deal with, the prisoners are committed to the assizes to take their trials, and the witnesses are bound over to prosecute and give evidence in the several cases. It must be assumed that, acting on orders from the Home Office, the officers whose duty it is to tax the costs of prosecutions have taken such cases into their consideration, and have sat in judgment on the proceedings of the magistrates. It is true that the acting magistrates may have spent many hours in careful and painstaking inquiries into several charges preferred before them against a prisoner, conceiving that they are bound so to do, and to commit him for trial on those several charges; and possibly, if the grand jury, which is an assemblage of the magistrates of the county, said, when the several charges came before them, 'We think the ends of justice will be obtained if we find a bill against the prisoner in one or two cases, and ignore the rest,' there would not be much ground of complaint. The acts of the magistrates sitting in petty sessions would, at any rate, be reviewed only by their whole body sitting as grand jury. But it does seem a strong measure, that by an unseen and irresponsible agent, the labours of the magistrates at petty sessions in investigating several charges against a prisoner, which they are bound to do when preferred, should be quietly shelved to save a fraction of the expenses of the trial, the witnesses being bound over and in attendance, and the attorney's brief generally already prepared; and that one case out of several against a prisoner should be selected on which to proceed, and run the chance of obtaining a conviction. But when it is recollected that this selection of the case to send before the grand jury is not made by the judge, or by counsel employed for the purpose, of adequate experience, or by the grand jury, but by the taxing officers, it is not surprising that such an extraordinary innovation and such an anomaly should lead, in many instances, to a failure of justice. A case of attempted murder, reported above, is one instance in point. The day before another instance occurred, where a man tried for sacrilege, one of several cases on which he was committed, and found guilty on this, the only bill preferred against him, took a legal objection, which his Lordship seemed to think valid; and it was only by his Lordship's interference, on the representation of the counsel engaged of the fact that other cases against the prisoner had not been sent before the grand jury, that another bill was ordered immediately to be preferred before they were discharged, on which the prisoner was conclusively found guilty, or this man would certainly have escaped the penalty of his offences, and the whole expense of his trial would have been thrown away. Of course, no one can find fault with economy properly exercised; but when the whole cost of the administration of justice is incurred in order to bring offenders effectually to justice, so to contrive that the worst offenders, who have committed more than one offence, often escape, would seem to ordinary minds to be, not economy, but great extravagance. It is another version of the old adage, 'for want of a ha'porth of tar the ship was lost'; a fractional additional expense in preferring a second bill would have secured beyond doubt the conviction of the criminal."

MIDLAND CIRCUIT, NORTHAMPTON.—Dec. 13.

[Before MARTIN, B.]

The grand jury, just before their discharge, made the following presentment:—

"The grand jury serving at this assize think it their duty to represent to your Lordship that they do not see, in the number or description of the cases that have been brought before them, any sufficient reason for putting the county to the expense and inconvenience of holding an assize at this unusual season. The grand jury are at all times ready to give their best assistance in executing the duties devolving upon them, but they are of opinion that the winter assize might have been dispensed with, without prejudice to any party; and they hope that your Lordship will forward their opinion to the proper department of her Majesty's Government."

MARTIN, B., said that a similar presentment had been made in Norfolk, and his opinion was that the assizes had been held there in consequence of the number of arsons in that and the neighbouring counties. The judges had nothing to do with deciding upon a winter assize. A communication was made by the Secretary of State to them, directing that assizes should be held, and all the judges had to do was to make arrangements for holding them. He would forward the memorial to the proper quarter; but it would be better if the matter were brought before the Secretary of State by their county members, as it might be thought that the judges wished themselves to escape the labour.

Mr. Henry Philip Roche, barrister-at-law, of Lincoln's-inn, has been appointed one of the Registrars of the Court of Bankruptcy, in the room of Mr. T. B. H. Abrahall, who has been appointed a Commissioner in Bankruptcy for the Newcastle District, in the place of the late Mr. Nathaniel Ellison.

THE JURIST.

LONDON, JANUARY 4, 1862.

COMMERCIAL and maritime law, important subjects everywhere, are particularly so in England, and have been illustrated by many legal works of merit. The great changes effected in them of late years, especially by the Merchant Shipping Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, and some other acts, have, however, rendered those works comparatively useless, and the production either of fresh editions of them, or new works on the subject, indispensable. Two of these, MacLachlan on Merchant Shipping, and Maude & Pollock on Merchant Shipping, second edition, have lately been reviewed by us. (Supra, p. 373). Still the law on these subjects is far from being perfect or well understood, not merely in consequence of those changes, but from other causes inherent in the subjects themselves. Among these may be noted the difficult and very objectionable character of their phraseology.

Lawyers have been reproached in every age as using and revelling in "jargon," practising what Bentham calls "jargonisation." By these expressions, we suppose, are meant the needlessly introducing new words in order to express ideas which are already perfectly expressed by words in existence; and also the using in some new and non-natural sense words which have fixed ideas attached to them. This last is far the more mischievous, and comes under one of the abuses of words pointed out by Locke, "the using them with affected obscurity by wrong application." But if lawyers have sinned in this respect, they are not the only culprits; other classes of society, and the mercantile class especially, might fairly dispute with them the palm of pre-eminence in it. Take, for instance, an ordinary policy of marine insurance. Mere acquaintance, however profound, with the English language, would not lead to an understanding of its real meaning, much more than a similar acquaintance with Arabic or Chinese; so thoroughly is that instrument pervaded with words used in distorted meanings, improper omissions, and antiquated expressions. The result of this is, that which always follows abuses of words, confusion of ideas; and their necessary consequence, ignorance of the subject-matter about which the words are employed. This sometimes goes so far as to reach even the fundamental principles of science or art.

An illustration may be found in the subject of "particular average"—an expression constantly used in the law of marine insurance; and a dispute as to the meaning of which arose in the recent case of The Great India Peninsula Railway Company v. Saunders (1 Best & Sm. 41; 7 Jur., N. S., part 1, p. 823). Before that case the term was thus explained in the second of the books to which we have referred:—

"Simple or particular average arises where any damage is done to the cargo or vessel by accident or otherwise, such as the loss of an anchor or cable, the starting of a plank, the turning sour of a cargo of wine, which are all losses which rest where they fall. This expression, as applied to losses of this description, has been said to be inaccurate; but the term average appears strictly not to imply any more than a damage." (Maude & Pollock on Merchant Shipping, 258, note (h)).

And in the first—

"General average denotes that contribution, which is made by all who are parties to the same adventure, towards a loss arising out of extraordinary sacrifices made, or extraordinary expenses incurred, by some of them for the common benefit of ship and cargo. By this name it is distinguished from 'particular average,' which in insurance law denotes an ordinary loss happening by misadventure to ship or cargo, and is borne where it falls; and by 'gross average,' as it is sometimes named, it is distinguished from 'petty average,' the average accustomed inserted in bills of lading, and usually compounded for by a small per-centage to the shipowner." (MacLachlan on Merchant Shipping, 556).

Subsequent to the publication of both these works arose the case in question. That was a case stated without pleadings, by consent and by order of a judge, under the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852:—The plaintiffs insured themselves by the ship Bombay, on a voyage to Kurrachee or Bombay, by a policy in the ordinary form of a Lombard-street policy, on "rails valued at 4500*l.*, warranted free from particular average, unless the ship be stranded, sunk, or burnt." It appeared that the goods were shipped on board The Bombay, to be carried on the voyage, for a sum to be paid here, ship lost or not lost. The ship was by perils of the seas disabled, and obliged to put into Plymouth in such a state that she was not worth repairing; and no doubt, therefore, there was what is commonly called a constructive total loss of the ship; but she was neither stranded, sunk, nor burnt. The rails—the subject-matter of the insurance—were saved, and were sent on in other vessels to their destination; and, in order to forward them to their destination, it was necessary to pay freight to the extent of 825*l.* 11*s.* 7*d.* As the original contract of carriage was for a sum to be paid here, ship lost or not lost, the whole of this sum of 825*l.* 11*s.* 7*d.* was an extra expense incurred by the shipper of the goods, in consequence of the sea risk which had frustrated the voyage of The Bombay; and the question for the Court to determine was, whether the insured could recover this sum on a policy containing that warranty. Mr. Edward James, by whom the case was argued on the part of the plaintiff, contended that the expression "particular average" was confined to losses arising from injury to, or deterioration of, the goods themselves, and did not include expenses incurred in relation to the goods; for which he cited several authorities, both English and American, as giving at least a colourable support to his doctrine. The Court stopped the counsel on the other side, saying that they would consider the matter, and, if necessary, hear him on a future day. This, however, was deemed unnecessary, and the following written judgment was delivered by Blackburn, J., in the name of the Court. After citing several authorities leading to a conclusion at variance with that contended for by the plaintiff's counsel, his Lordship proceeded thus:—"No case has been cited, nor are we aware of the existence of any, tending to shew that these definitions of particular average are inaccurate. We think that we must put the same construction on this policy as if it had been expressed to be 'against total loss and general average only;' and, if so, it is self-evident that the claim in the present case cannot be in any way treated as a total loss or a general average." And judgment was accordingly given for the defendant.

There was another point in the case, to which we need not refer. We believe it is the intention of the parties to bring the case before a court of error.

In further illustration of the subject we may refer here to the extremely equivocal nature of the term "average." In MacLachlan, (pp. 381, 382) we find the following:—"The word average in this place denotes several petty charges, which are to be borne partly by the ship and partly by the cargo, such as the expense of trimming, beaconage, &c. Some of the foreign ordinances specify the particulars that fall under this head, and the mode of distributing the charge; but with us they depend entirely upon usage, and an attempt to enumerate them would afford neither instruction nor entertainment." And in 1 Park. Ins. c. 6, 8th ed., speaking of partial losses and adjustment—"Another source of perplexity upon this subject is, the irregularity and confusion, which we meet with, in the present form of policies of insurance. Ambiguities frequently arise in them by using the same words in different senses; and in no instance is this absurdity more glaring than in the use of the word average. This word in policies has two significations; for it means, 'a contribution to a general loss;' and it is also used to signify 'a particular partial loss.' In commercial affairs, indeed, it has no less than four different meanings: and therefore it cannot be wondered at if much confusion of ideas has arisen upon the subject." The author then proceeds to distinguish between the four different senses of the word "average;" i. e. first, general average; secondly, small or petty average; thirdly, primage; fourthly, partial loss.

6. Commissioners of National Debt to transmit to Treasury the amount of unredeemed debt on the 5th April, 1861. Allowance for management to be computed on such amount.

7. And whereas the said governor and company have heretofore closed the books for transfer of the various capital stocks and annuities created by Parliament transferable at the Bank of England, forming part of the unredeemed public debt, for a certain number of days prior to the days fixed for the payment of the half-yearly dividend thereon respectively, in order to their convenience in calculating the dividends due to the several proprietors thereof, and preparing the warrants for the same, and during the period of such closing no transfers have been permitted, except under circumstances of special necessity, and such transfers have been attended with great inconvenience, by reason of the stock so transferred carrying the right to the current half-year's dividend: and whereas it is desirable to increase the facilities for the transfer of such stocks: be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said governor and company to close the books for the transfer of the said several stocks and annuities respectively on any day in the month preceding that in which the dividends thereon respectively shall by law be payable; and the person or persons who on the day of the closing of such books was or were inscribed as the proprietor or proprietors of any share or shares of and in such stocks and annuities respectively shall, as between him, her, or them, and the transferee or transferees thereof, be the person or persons entitled to the then current half-year's dividend thereon; and the person or persons to whom any transfer shall be made after the day of the closing of such books shall not be entitled to the then current half-year's dividend on such stock, but shall take and accept the same exclusive of the right to the said half-yearly dividend; provided that the period for which such books of transfer shall be closed shall not exceed fifteen days.

8. Extending powers of the 56 Geo. 3, c. 60, as to the re-transfer of unclaimed dividends stock.

9. Accounts to be laid before Parliament by the Bank.

10. And whereas the said governor and company have also heretofore closed, in the manner and for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned, the books for transfer of certain stocks created by the Secretary of State in Council of India, under the authority of certain acts of Parliament empowering him in that behalf, and it is desirable that the provisions hereinbefore contained shall extend to the said last-mentioned stocks likewise: be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the said governor and company in like manner to close the books for the transfer of the said stocks so created by the Secretary of State in Council for India as aforesaid respectively, on any day in the month preceding that in which the dividends thereon respectively shall by law be due, and thereupon the rights of the transferor and transferee respectively to such dividends shall be the same as is hereinbefore provided respecting the transferor and transferee of dividends of other capital stocks transferable at the Bank of England in the like case; provided that the period for which such books of transfer shall be closed shall not exceed fifteen days.

CAP. IX.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Conveyance of Land for Charitable Uses.

[17th May, 1861.]

- Sec. 1. No future deed, &c. for charitable uses to be void by reason of not being indented, or of specified stipulations for the donor's benefit, or (as to copyholds) for want of deed.
2. Where charitable uses of any future deed, &c. are declared by any separate or other deed, &c., inrolment of such separate or other deed, &c. requisite.
3. No past deed, &c. for charitable uses upon valuable consideration to be void for any reason if inrolled in Chancery.
4. Where charitable uses of any past deed, &c. not inrolled are declared by any other deed, &c., inrolment of such other deed, &c. sufficient. Where neither deed, &c. is inrolled, inrolment of such separate or other deed, &c. requisite.
5. Act not to invalidate certain deeds, nor to extend to deeds, &c. already avoided, or to pending suits. When acknowledgment not necessary.
6. Act not to extend to Scotland or Ireland, nor to prejudice the two universities, or the colleges of Eton, Winchester, or Westminster.

Whereas, by an act passed in the 9 Geo. 2, [c. 36], intituled "An Act to restrain the Disposition of Lands whereby the same become inalienable," it was amongst other things enacted, that no lands or other hereditaments should be given, granted, or any ways conveyed, settled, or charged for charitable uses, unless such gift, conveyance, or settlement should be made by deed indented and inrolled, sealed and delivered in the presence of two or more credible witnesses twelve calendar months at least before the death of such donor or grantor, and should be inrolled in the High Court of Chancery within six calendar months next after the execution thereof, and unless the same should be made to take effect in possession for the charitable use intended immediately from the making thereof, and should be without any power of revocation, reservation, trust, condition, limitation, clause, or agreement whatsoever for the benefit of the donor or grantor, or of any person claiming under him: and whereas, by another act passed in the 9 Geo. 4, [c. 85], intituled "An Act for remedying a Defect in the Titles of Lands purchased for Charitable Purposes," it was enacted, that where any lands, tenements, or hereditaments had been purchased for a full and valuable consideration for charitable uses, and such consideration had been actually paid, every deed or other assurance then already made for the purpose of conveying or assuring the same should (subject as in the now-recited act mentioned) be as good and valid in all respects as if the several formalities by the said first-recited act prescribed had been duly observed and performed: and whereas doubts have been entertained with reference to the assurance for charitable uses of hereditaments of copyhold or customary tenure: and whereas it is expedient to make provision for further remedying defects and obviating doubts and difficulties, and as to inrolment in regard to deeds and assurances of hereditaments conveyed for charitable uses in manner hereinafter provided: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sec. 1. No deed or assurance hereafter to be made for any charitable uses whatsoever of any hereditaments of any tenure whatsoever, or of any estate or interest therein, shall be deemed to be null and void, within the meaning of the first-recited act, by reason of such deed or assurance not being indented, or not purporting to be indented, nor by reason of such deed or assurance, or any deed forming part of the same transaction, containing any grant or reservation of any peppercorn or other nominal rent, or of any mines or minerals, or easement, or any covenants or provisions as to the erection, repair, position, or description of buildings, the formation or repair of streets or roads, drainage or nuisances, or any covenants or provisions of the like nature for the use and enjoyment as well of the hereditaments comprised in such deed or assurance as of any other adjacent or neighbouring hereditaments, or any right of entry on non-payment of any such rent, or on breach of any such covenant or provision, or any stipulations of the like nature for the benefit of the donor or grantor, or of any person or persons claiming under him, nor (in the case of any such assurance of hereditaments of copyhold or customary tenure, or of any estate or interest therein) by reason of the same not being made by deed, nor, in the case of such assurances made bonâ fide on a sale for a full and valuable consideration, by reason of such consideration consisting wholly or partly of a rent, rent-charge, or other annual payment reserved or made payable to the vendor or to any other person, with or without a right of re-entry for non-payment thereof: provided always, that in all reservations authorised by this act, the donor, grantor, or vendor shall reserve the same benefits for his representatives as for himself.

2. In all cases where the charitable uses of any deed or assurance hereafter to be made for conveyance of any hereditaments for any charitable uses shall be declared by any separate or other deed or instrument, it shall not be necessary, for the purposes of the first-recited act or of this act, to inrol such deed or assurance for conveyance; but every such deed or assurance for conveyance shall nevertheless be absolutely null and void unless such separate or other deed or instrument shall, within six calendar months next after the making or perfecting of such deed or assurance for conveyance, be inrolled in her Majesty's High Court of Chancery, and such inrolment as last aforesaid shall be deemed and treated, for all purposes of the first-recited act and of this act, as if such deed or assurance for conveyance had declared such charitable uses, and had been so inrolled as last aforesaid.

3. No deed or assurance heretofore made, and under which possession is now held, for any charitable uses whatsoever, of any hereditaments, of any tenure whatsoever, or of any estate or interest therein, made really and bonâ fide for a full and valuable consideration actually paid at or before the making or perfecting such deed or assurance, or reserved by way of rent, rent-charge, or other annual payment, or partly paid at or before the making or perfecting such deed or assurance, and partly reserved as aforesaid, without fraud or collusion, shall, for any reason whatever, be deemed to be null and void within the meaning of the first-recited act, if such deed or assurance was made to take effect in possession for the charitable uses intended immediately from the making thereof, and without any power of revocation, and has been at any time prior to the passing of this act, or shall be within twelve calendar months next after the passing of this act, inrolled in her Majesty's High Court of Chancery.

4. In all cases where the charitable uses of any deed or assurance heretofore made for conveyance of any hereditaments for any charitable uses upon such full and valuable consideration as aforesaid, and under which possession is now held for such uses, have been declared by any separate or other deed or instrument, and such deed or assurance for conveyance has not been inrolled in her Majesty's High Court of Chancery prior to the passing of this act, but such separate or other deed or instrument has been so inrolled, such inrolment shall be deemed and treated, for all purposes of the first-recited act and of this act, as if such deed or assurance for conveyance had declared such charitable uses, and had been so inrolled as last aforesaid; but if neither of such deeds nor such instrument has been so inrolled, then it shall not be necessary for the purposes of the first-recited act or of this act to inrol such deed or assurance for conveyance, but every such deed or assurance for conveyance shall nevertheless be absolutely and to all intents and purposes null and void, unless such separate or other deed or instrument shall within twelve calendar months next after the passing of this act be so inrolled; and such inrolment as last aforesaid shall be deemed and treated, for all purposes of the first-recited act and of this act, as if such deed or assurance for conveyance had declared such charitable uses, and had been so inrolled as last aforesaid.

5. Nothing in this act contained shall extend to render null and void, or in any manner to affect or apply to, any deed already good and valid by virtue of the secondly-recited act, or of any other act, or to give effect to any deed or assurance heretofore made, so far as such deed or assurance has already been avoided by any suit at law or in equity, or by any other legal or equitable means whatsoever, or to affect or prejudice any suit at law or in equity actually commenced for avoiding any such deed or assurance, or for defeating the charitable uses in trust or for the benefit of which such deed or assurance has been made; and no deed, assurance, or instrument thirty years old, nor any deed, assurance, or instrument heretofore executed, as to which it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the clerk of inrolments in Chancery that the acknowledgment thereof by the grantor of the lands or hereditaments to which the same relates cannot be obtained within twelve calendar months after the passing of this act, shall, for the purposes of the first-recited act or of this act, require acknowledgment prior to inrolment.

6. Nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the disposition, grant, or settlement of any property or estate lying or being in Scotland or in Ireland, nor to make void any dispositions made or to be made to or in trust for either of the two universities, or any of the colleges or houses of learning within either of such universities, in the first-recited act mentioned, or to or in trust for the colleges of Eton, Winchester, or Westminster, or any or either of them, for the better support and maintenance of scholars only upon the foundation of the said colleges of Eton, Winchester, and Westminster.

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Admiralty Court Act, 1861."

2. In the interpretation and for the purposes of this act (if not inconsistent with the context or subject) the following terms shall have the respective meanings hereinafter assigned to them—that is to say,

"Ship" shall include any description of vessel used in navigation not propelled by oars:

3. This act shall come into operation on the 1st June, 1861.

4. The High Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction over any claim for the building, equipping, or repairing of any ship, if at the time of the institution of the cause the ship, or the proceeds thereof, are under the arrest of the court.

5. The High Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction over any claim for necessities supplied to any ship elsewhere than in the port to which the ship belongs, unless it is shewn to the satisfaction of the court that at the time of the institution of the cause any owner or part owner of the ship is domiciled in England or Wales: provided always, that if in any such cause the plaintiff do not recover 20*l.*, he shall not be entitled to any costs, charges, or expenses incurred by him therein, unless the judge shall certify that the cause was a fit one to be tried in the said court.

6. The High Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction over any claim by the owner, or consignee or assignee, of any bill of lading of any goods carried into any port in England or Wales in any ship, for damage done to the goods, or any part thereof, by the negligence or misconduct of, or for any breach of duty or breach of contract on the part of, the owner, master, or crew of the ship, unless it is shewn to the satisfaction of the court that at the time of the institu-

7. The High Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction over any claim for damage done by any ship.

8. The High Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction to decide all questions arising between the co-owners or any of them touching the ownership, possession, employment, and earnings of any ship registered at any port in England or Wales, or any share thereof, and may settle all accounts outstanding and unsettled between the parties in relation thereto, and may direct the said ship, or any share thereof, to be sold, and may make such order in the premises as to it shall seem fit.

9. All the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, in regard to salvage of life from any ship or boat within the limits of the United Kingdom, shall be extended to the salvage of life from any British ship or boat, wheresoever the services may have been rendered, and from any foreign ship or boat, where the services have been rendered either wholly or in part in British waters.

10. The High Court of Admiralty shall have jurisdiction over any claim by a seaman of any ship for wages earned by him on board the ship, whether the same be due under a special contract or otherwise, and also over any claim by the master of any ship for wages earned by him on board the ship, and for disbursements made by him on account of the ship: provided always, that if in any such cause the plaintiff do not recover 50*l.*, he shall not be entitled to any costs, charges, or expenses incurred by him therein, unless the judge shall certify that the cause was a fit one to be tried in the said court.

14. The High Court of Admiralty shall be a court of record for all intents and purposes.

15. All decrees and orders of the High Court of Admiralty, whereby any sum of money, or any costs, charges, or expenses, shall be payable to any person, shall have the same effect as judgments in the superior courts of common law, and the persons to whom any such monies, or costs, charges, or expenses, shall be payable, shall be deemed judgment creditors; and all powers of enforcing judgments possessed by the superior courts of common law, or any judge thereof, with respect to matters depending in the same courts, as well against the ships and goods arrested as against the person of the judgment debtor, shall be possessed by the said Court of Admiralty with respect to matters therein depending; and all remedies at common law possessed by judgment creditors shall be in like manner possessed by persons to whom any monies, costs, charges, or expenses are, by such orders or decrees of the said Court of Admiralty, directed to be paid.

16. If any claim shall be made to any goods or chattels taken in execution under any process of the High Court of Admiralty, or in respect of the seizure thereof, or any act or matter connected therewith, or in respect of the proceeds or value of any such goods or chattels, by any landlord for rent, or by any person not being the party against whom the process has issued, the registrar of the said court may, upon application of the officer charged with the execution of the process, whether before or after any action brought against such officer, issue a summons calling before the said court both the party issuing such process and the party making the claim, and thereupon any action which shall have been brought in any of her Majesty's superior courts of record, or in any local or inferior court, in respect of such claim, seizure, act, or matter as aforesaid, shall be stayed; and the court in which such action shall have been brought, or any judge thereof, on proof of the issue of such summons, and that the goods and chattels were so taken in execution, may order the party bringing the action to pay the costs of all proceedings had upon the action after issue of the summons out of the said Admiralty Court; and the judge of the said Admiralty Court shall adjudicate upon the claim, and make such order between the parties in respect thereof, and of the costs of the proceedings, as to him shall seem fit; and such order shall be enforced in like manner as any order made in any suit brought in the said court. Where any such claim shall be made as aforesaid, the claimant may deposit with the officer charged with the execution of the process either the amount or value of the goods claimed, the value to be fixed by appraisement in case of dispute, to be by the officer paid into court to abide the decision of the judge upon the claim, or the sum which the officer shall be allowed to charge as costs for keeping possession of the goods until such decision can be obtained; and in default of the claimant so doing, the officer may sell the goods, as if no such claim had been made, and shall pay into court the proceeds of the sale, to abide the decision of the judge.

17. The judge of the High Court of Admiralty shall have all such powers as are possessed by any of the superior courts of common law, or any judge thereof, to compel either party in any cause or matter to answer interrogatories, and to enforce the production, inspection, and delivery of copies of any document in his possession or power.

18. Any party in a cause in the High Court of Admiralty shall be at liberty to apply to the said court for an order for the inspection by the Trinity Masters or others appointed for the trial of the said cause, or by the party himself or his witnesses, of any ship or other personal or real property, the inspection of which may be material to the issue of the cause, and the court may make such order in respect of the costs arising thereon as to it shall seem fit.

19. Any party in a cause in the High Court of Admiralty may call on any other party in the cause, by notice in writing, to admit any document, saving all just exceptions; and in case of refusal or neglect to admit, the costs of proving the document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the cause may be, unless at the trial the judge shall certify that the refusal to admit was reasonable.

20. Whenever it shall be made to appear to the judge of the High Court of Admiralty that reasonable efforts have been made to effect personal service of any citation, monition, or other process issued under seal of the said court, and either that the same has come to the knowledge of the party thereby cited or monished, or that he wilfully evades service of the same, and has not appeared thereto, the said judge may order that the party on whose behalf the citation, monition, or other process was issued be at liberty to proceed as if personal service had been effected, subject to such conditions as to the judge may seem fit, and all proceedings thereon shall be as effectual as if personal service of such citation, monition, or other process had been effected.

21. The service in any part of Great Britain or Ireland of any writ of subpoena ad testificandum or subpoena duces tecum, issued under seal of the High Court of Admiralty, shall be as effectual as if the same had been served in England or Wales.

22. Any new writ or other process necessary or expedient for giving effect to any of the provisions of this act may be issued from the High Court of Admiralty in such form as the judge of the said court shall from time to time direct.

23. All the powers possessed by any of the superior courts of common law, or any judge thereof, under the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, and otherwise, with regard to references to arbitration, proceedings thereon, and the enforcing of awards of arbitrators, shall be possessed by the judge of the High Court of Admiralty in all causes and matters depending in the said court; and the registrar of the said Court of Admiralty shall possess, as to such matters, the same powers as are possessed by the masters of the said superior courts of common law in relation thereto.

24. The registrar of the High Court of Admiralty shall have the same powers under the 15th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, as are by the said section conferred on the masters of her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench in England and Ireland.

25. The registrar of the High Court of Admiralty may exercise, with reference to causes and matters in the said court, the same powers as any surrogate of the judge of the said court sitting in chambers might or could have heretofore lawfully exercised; and all powers and authorities by this or any other act conferred upon or vested in the registrar of the said High Court of Admiralty may be exercised by any deputy or assistant registrar of the said court.

26. The registrar of the said Court of Admiralty shall have power to administer oaths in relation to any cause or matter depending in the said court; and any person who shall wilfully depose or affirm falsely in any proceeding before the registrar, or before any deputy or assistant registrar, of the said court, or before any person authorized to administer oaths in the said court, shall be deemed to be guilty of perjury, and shall be liable to all the pains and penalties attaching to wilful and corrupt perjury.

27. Any advocate, barrister-at-law, proctor, attorney, or solicitor of ten years' standing may be appointed registrar, or assistant or deputy registrar, of the said court.

28. Any advocate, barrister-at-law, proctor, attorney, or solicitor may be appointed an examiner of the High Court of Admiralty.

29. Any person who shall have paid, on his admission in any court as a proctor, solicitor, or attorney, the full stamp duty of 25*l.*, and who has been or shall hereafter be admitted a proctor, solicitor, or attorney (if in other respects entitled to be so admitted), shall be liable to no further stamp duty in respect of such subsequent admission.

30. Any proctor of the High Court of Admiralty may act as agent of any attorney or solicitor, and allow him to participate in the profits of and incident to any cause or matter depending in or connected with the said court; and nothing contained in the act of the 55 Geo. 3, c. 160, shall be construed to extend to prevent any proctor from so doing, or to render him liable to any penalty in respect thereof.

31. The act passed in the 3 Hen. 4, intitled "A Remedy for him who is wrongfully pursued in the Court of Admiralty," is hereby repealed.

32. Any party aggrieved by any order or decree of the judge of the said Court of Admiralty, whether made ex parte or otherwise, may, with the permission of the judge, appeal therefrom to her Majesty in Council, as fully and effectually as from any final decree or sentence of the said court.

33. In any cause in the High Court of Admiralty bail may be taken to answer the judgment as well of the said court as of the court of appeal, and the said High Court of Admiralty may withhold the release of any property under its arrest until such bail has been given; and in any appeal from any decree or order of the High Court of Admiralty, the court of appeal may make and enforce its order against the surety or sureties who may have signed any such bail bond, in the same manner as if the bail had been given in the court of appeal.

34. The High Court of Admiralty may, on the application of the defendant in any cause of damage, and on his instituting a cross cause for the damage sustained by him in respect of the same collision, direct that the principal cause and the cross cause be heard at the same time and upon the same evidence; and if in the principal cause the ship of the defendant has been arrested, or security given by him to answer judgment, and in the cross cause the ship of the plaintiff cannot be arrested, and security has not been given to answer judgment therein, the court may, if it think fit, suspend the proceedings in the principal cause until security has been given to answer judgment in the cross cause.

35. The jurisdiction conferred by this act on the High Court of Admiralty may be exercised either by proceedings in rem or by proceedings in personam.

CAP. XI.

An Act to afford Facilities for the better Ascertainment of the Law of Foreign Countries when pleaded in Courts within Her Majesty's Dominions. [17th May, 1861.]

Sec 1. Superior courts within her Majesty's dominions may remit a case, with queries, to a court of any foreign State with which her Majesty may have made a convention for that purpose, for ascertainment of the law of such State.

2. Court in which action depends to apply such opinion to the facts set forth in cases, &c.

3. Court in her Majesty's dominions may pronounce opinion on case remitted by a foreign court.

Whereas an act was passed in the 22 & 23 Vict. [c. 63], intituled "An Act to afford Facilities for the more certain Ascertainment of the Law administered in one Part of her Majesty's Dominions when pleaded in the Courts of another Part thereof;" and whereas it is expedient to afford the like facilities for the better ascertainment, in similar circumstances, of the law of any foreign country or state with the government of which her Majesty may be pleased to enter into a convention for the purpose of mutually ascertaining the law of such foreign country or state when pleaded in actions depending in any courts within her Majesty's dominions, and the law as administered in any part of her Majesty's dominions when pleaded in actions depending in the courts of such foreign country or state: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows, viz:—

Sect. 1. If, in any action depending in any of the superior courts within her Majesty's dominions, it shall be the opinion of such court that it is necessary or expedient, for the disposal of such action, to ascertain the law applicable to the facts of the case as administered in any foreign state or country with the government of which her Majesty shall have entered into such convention as aforesaid, it shall be competent to the court in which such action may depend to direct a case to be prepared, setting forth the facts as these may be ascertained by verdict of jury or other mode competent, or as may be agreed upon by the parties, or settled by such person or persons as may have been appointed by the court, for that purpose in the event of the parties not agreeing; and upon such case being approved of by such court or a judge thereof, such court or judge shall settle the questions of law arising out of the same on which they desire to have the opinion of another court, and shall pronounce an order remitting the same, together with the case, to such superior court in such foreign state or country as shall be agreed upon in the said convention, whose opinion is desired upon the law administered by such foreign court as applicable to the facts set forth in such case, and requesting them to pronounce their opinion on the questions submitted to them; and upon such opinion being pronounced, a copy thereof, certified by an officer of such court, shall be deemed and held to contain a correct record of such opinion.

2. It shall be competent to any of the parties to the action, after having obtained such certified copy of such opinion, to lodge the same with the officer of the court within her Majesty's dominions in which the action may be depending who may have the official charge thereof, together with a notice of motion setting forth that the party will, on a certain day named in such notice, move the court to apply the opinion contained in such certified copy thereof to the facts set forth in the case hereinbefore specified; and the said court shall thereupon, if it shall see fit, apply such opinion to such facts, in the same manner as if the same had been pronounced by such court itself upon a case reserved for the opinion of the court, or upon special verdict of a jury; or the said last-mentioned court shall, if it think fit, when the said opinion has been obtained before trial, order such opinion to be submitted to the jury, with the other facts of the case, as conclusive evidence of the foreign law therein stated, and the said opinion shall be so submitted to the jury: provided always, that if, after having obtained such certified copy, the court shall not be satisfied that the facts had been properly understood by the foreign court to which the case was remitted, or shall on any ground whatsoever be doubtful whether the opinion so certified does correctly represent the foreign law as regards the facts to which it is to be applied, it shall be lawful for such court to remit the said case, either with or without alterations or amendments, to the same or to any other such superior court in such foreign state as aforesaid, and so from time to time as may be necessary or expedient.

3. If, in any action depending in any court of a foreign country or state with whose government her Majesty shall have entered into a convention as above set forth, such court shall deem it expedient to ascertain the law applicable to the facts of the case as administered in any part of her Majesty's dominions, and if the foreign court in which such action may depend shall remit to the court in her Majesty's dominions whose opinion is desired a case setting forth the facts, and the questions of law arising out of the same, on which they desire to have the opinion of a court within her Majesty's dominions, it shall be competent to any of the parties to the action to present a petition to such last-mentioned court whose opinion is to be obtained, praying such court to hear parties or their counsel, and to pronounce their opinion thereon in terms of this act, or to pronounce their opinion without hearing parties or counsel; and the court to which such petition shall be presented shall consider the same, and, if they think fit, shall appoint an early day for hearing parties or their counsel on such case, and shall pronounce their opinion upon the questions of law, as administered by them, which are submitted to them by the foreign court; and in order to their pronouncing such opinion, they shall be entitled to take such further procedure thereupon as to them shall seem proper; and upon such opinion being pronounced, a copy thereof, certified by an officer of such court, shall be given to each of the parties to the action by whom the same shall be required.

4. In the construction of this act the word "action" shall include every judicial proceeding instituted in any court, civil, criminal, or ecclesiastical; and the words "superior courts" shall include, in England, the superior courts of law at Westminster, the Lord Chancellor, the Lords Justices, the Master of the Rolls, or any Vice-Chancellor, the Judge of the Court of Admiralty, the Judge Ordinary of the Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes, and the Judge of the Court of Probate; in Scotland, the High Court of Justiciary, and the Court of Session, acting by either of its divisions; in Ireland, the superior courts of law at Dublin, the Master of the Rolls, and the Judge of the Admiralty Court; and in any other part of her Majesty's dominions, the superior courts of law or equity therein; and in a foreign country or state, any superior court or courts which shall be set forth in any such convention between her Majesty and the government of such foreign country or state.

Whereas it is expedient to enlarge the facilities now available for the deposit of small savings, and to make the General Post-office available for that purpose, and to give the direct security of the State to every such depositor for repayment of all monies so deposited by him, together with the interest due thereon: be it therefore enacted &c.:

Sec. 1. It shall be lawful for the Postmaster-General, with the consent of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, to authorise and direct such of his officers as he shall think fit to receive deposits for remittance to the principal office, and to repay the same, under such regulations as he, with the concurrence of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, may prescribe in that respect.

2. Every deposit received by any officer of the Postmaster-General appointed for that purpose shall be entered by him at the time in the depositor's book, and the entry shall be attested by him and by the dated stamp of his office; and the amount of such deposit shall, upon the day of such receipt, be reported by such officer to the Postmaster-General, and the acknowledgment of the Postmaster-General, signified by the officer whom he shall appoint for the purpose, shall be forthwith transmitted to the depositor, and the said acknowledgment shall be conclusive evidence of his claim to the repayment thereof, with the interest thereon, upon demand made by him on the Postmaster-General; and, in order to allow a reasonable time for the receipt of the said acknowledgment, the entry by the proper officer in the depositor's book shall also be conclusive evidence of title for ten days from the lodgment of the deposit; and if the said acknowledgment shall not have been received by the depositor through the post within ten days, and he shall, before or upon the expiry thereof, demand the said acknowledgment from the Postmaster-General, then the entry in his book shall be conclusive evidence of title during another term of ten days, and toties quoties: provided always, that such deposits shall not be of less amount than 1s., nor of any sum not a multiple thereof.

3. On demand of the depositor, or party legally authorised to claim on account of a depositor, made in such form as shall be prescribed in that behalf, for repayment of any deposit, or any part thereof, the authority of the Postmaster-General for such repayment shall be transmitted to the depositor forthwith, and the depositor shall be absolutely entitled to repayment of any sum or sums that may be due to him, within ten days at farthest after his demand shall be made at any post-office where deposits are received or paid.

4. The officers of the Postmaster-General engaged in the receipt or payment of deposits shall not disclose the name of any depositor, nor the amount deposited or withdrawn, except to the Postmaster-General, or to such of his officers as may be appointed to assist in carrying this act into operation.

5. All monies so deposited with the Postmaster-General shall forthwith be paid over to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; and all sums withdrawn by depositors, or by parties legally authorised to claim on account of depositors, shall be repaid to them out of the said monies, through the office of her Majesty's Postmaster-General.

6. If at any time the fund to be created under the authority of this act, by the investment of the deposits, shall be insufficient to meet the lawful claims of all depositors, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, upon being duly informed thereof by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, to issue the amount of such deficiency out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, or out of the growing produce thereof; and the said Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury shall certify such deficiency to Parliament.

7. The interest payable to the parties making such deposits shall be at the rate of 2½. per centum per annum, but such interest shall not be calculated on any amount less than 1l. or some multiple thereof, and not commence until the first day of the calendar month next following the day of deposit, and shall cease on the first day of the calendar month in which such deposit is withdrawn.

8. Interest on deposits shall be calculated to the 31st December in every year, and shall be added to and become part of the principal money.

9. The monies remitted to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt under the authority of this act shall be invested in some or in all of the securities in which the funds of savings banks established under the existing laws may be invested, and a separate and distinct account shall be kept by the said commissioners of all receipts, investments, sales, and repayments; and a balance sheet of such account, from the 1st January to the 31st December in every year, shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament not later than the 31st March in every year.

10. If any depositor making deposit under this act shall desire to transfer the amount of such deposit to a savings bank established under the acts relating to savings banks, he shall, upon application to the chief office of the Postmaster-General, be furnished with a certificate stating the whole amount which may be due to him, with interest, and thereupon his account under this act shall be closed; and, upon delivery of such certificate to the trustees or managers of the savings bank to which it is proposed by the depositor to transfer such deposit, they shall, if they think fit, open an account for the amount stated in such certificate for such depositor, who shall thereupon be subject to the rules of such savings bank; and the amount so transferred shall, upon such certificate being forwarded to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, be written off in the books of the said commissioners from the amount of monies received under the authority of this act, and shall be carried to the account of the savings bank to which such transfer shall have been made; and in like manner, if any depositor in a savings bank established under the Savings Bank Acts shall desire to transfer the amount due to him, with interest, from such savings bank to the Postmaster-General, for deposit under the provisions of this act, the trustees or managers of such savings bank shall, upon his request, furnish such depositor with a certificate, in a form to be approved by the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, signed by two trustees of such savings bank, and thereupon his account with such savings bank shall be closed, which certificate the depositor may deliver to any officer of the Postmaster-General authorised to receive deposits under this act, and such certificate shall for the amount therein set forth be considered to be a deposit made under the authority of this act, and, being forwarded to the said commissioners, the said amount shall then be transferred in the books of the said commissioners from the account of the said savings bank to the credit of the account of monies deposited under the authority of this act: provided always, that nothing contained in this act respecting savings banks shall render it necessary to have the rules and regulations of any savings bank again certified if the same have been before certified according to law.

11. The Postmaster-General, with the consent of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, may make, and from time to time, as he shall see occasion, alter regulations for superintending, inspecting, and regulating the mode of keeping and examining the accounts of depositors, and with respect to the making of deposits and to the withdrawal of deposits and interest, and all other matters incidental to the carrying this act into execution, in his department, and all regulations so made shall be binding on the parties interested in the subject-matter thereof, to the same extent as if such regulations formed part of this act; and copies of all regulations issued under the authority of this act shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within fourteen days from the date thereof, if Parliament shall be then sitting, and if not, then within fourteen days from the next re-assembling of Parliament.

12. An annual account of all deposits received and paid under the authority of this act, and of the expenses incurred during the year ended the 31st December, together with a statement of the total amount due at the close of the year to all depositors, shall be laid by the Postmaster-General before both Houses of Parliament not later than the 31st March in every year.

13. The annual accounts of the Postmaster-General, and of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, to the 31st December in each year, in respect to all monies deposited or invested under the authority of this act, shall annually, prior to the 31st March in each year, be submitted for examination and audit to the commissioners for auditing public accounts.

14. All the provisions of the acts now in force relating to savings banks, as to matters for which no other provision is made by this act, shall be deemed applicable to this act, so far as the same are not repugnant thereto.

15. All expenses incurred in the execution of this act shall be paid out of the monies received under the authority of this act.

2. Where a child under the age of sixteen years, residing with its surviving parent, shall be left an orphan, and such parent shall, at the time of death, have acquired an exemption from removal by reason of a continued residence, such orphan shall, if not otherwise irremovable, be exempt from removal in like manner, and to the same extent, as if it had then acquired for itself an exemption from removal by residence.

3. Where a married woman shall have been or shall be deserted by her husband, and shall, after his desertion, reside for three years in such a manner as would, if she were a widow, render her exempt from removal, she shall not be liable to be removed from the parish wherein she shall be resident, unless her husband return to cohabit with her.

4. Where any destitute wayfarer, wanderer, or foundling shall be or become chargeable upon the common fund of any union, the cost of the relief of such wayfarer, wanderer, or foundling shall continue to be charged to such common fund until the relief shall be discontinued.

5. 7. 8. The temporary provisions of the several statutes, whereby the costs of the relief, burial, and maintenance of certain paupers have been made chargeable upon the common fund of unions until the end of this session of Parliament, are hereby made perpetual.

10. The guardians of every such union, in computing the amount of contribution to the common fund from the several parishes, shall take the annual rateable value of such property in every parish therein from the valuation upon which such parish was assessed to the county rate, or, where there is no county rate, to the borough or ward rate, or other rate in the nature of a county rate, in the last assessment made not less than one month next preceding the day when the order for such contribution is made.

11. No order of guardians for contribution purporting to be made in accordance with this act shall be deemed to be void by reason of any error in the estimate of the rateable value of the property in any parish in the union upon which the contribution shall have been calculated; but every parish affected by such error shall be entitled to have the same set right in the making out and closing of the accounts of the union, or at the audit thereof.

12. The words used in this act shall be construed in the like manner as in the said act of King William the Fourth; and the provisions contained therein, and in the subsequent acts explaining and extending the same, and not repealed, shall, so far as they shall be consistent herewith, be extended to this act.

- (2). It shall be lawful for a meeting of ratepayers of the excluded part (to be convened and conducted in the manner prescribed by the 13th section of the said Local Government Act, 1858, with respect to districts, not being corporate boroughs or towns, under the jurisdiction of improvement commissioners) to decide that such excluded part shall be formed into a separate highway district; and thereupon the excluded part shall, for all purposes connected with highways, surveyors of highways, and highway rates, be considered and treated as a township maintaining its own highways:
- (3). The requisition for holding such meeting as last mentioned shall, in any excluded part where the said Local Government Act, 1858, has been in force before the passing of this act, be presented within six calendar months after the passing of this act, and in all other cases within six calendar months after the adoption of the said Local Government Act, 1858; but nothing in this section before contained shall apply to districts constituted under the Public Health Act, 1848, including a part only of any parish, township, or place which before the constitution of such district maintained its own highways.

12. Where, in any district, special district rates are levied over the same area as general district rates, the local board may make and levy such special district rates as part and under the name of general district rates: provided always, that the levying of such rates by the means aforesaid shall in no way prejudicially affect any mortgages now or hereafter to be made upon such special district rates.

Seven clear days at least before the day fixed for the audit of accounts of any local board, the local board shall cause their rate books and other accounts to be made up and balanced, and the books and accounts so made up and balanced shall forthwith be deposited at the office of the said local board for the inspection of owners and ratepayers, and the notice of audit shall include a notice of such deposit of accounts; and any officer of a local board, duly appointed in that behalf, neglecting to make up such books and accounts, or allowing them to be altered when so made up, or refusing to allow inspection thereof, shall be liable, on conviction thereof, to forfeit 40s.; and it shall be lawful for any ratepayer or owner of property in the district to be present at the audit of accounts of the local board, and to make any objection to such accounts before the auditor; and such rate-payers and owners shall have the same right of appeal against allowances by an auditor as they have by law against disallowances.

12. Provisions of general acts relating to turnpike roads to apply to locomotives.
13. Right of action in case of nuisance.
14. Short title.
15. Extent of act.

Whereas the use of locomotives is likely to become common on turnpike and other roads: and whereas the general turnpike and highway acts, and many of the local turnpike acts, do not contain any provisions for regulating the use of locomotives on the roads to which they respectively apply, nor do they authorise the levying of tolls upon or in respect of any locomotive using the roads, or upon or in respect of any waggon or carriage drawn by locomotives: and whereas, under and by virtue of certain local turnpike acts, tolls may be levied upon locomotives and other engines drawing or propelling waggons or carriages, or upon the waggons or carriages so drawn or propelled, which are or may be prohibitory of the use of locomotives on the roads to which the said acts respectively apply: and whereas the weighing clauses in the general turnpike acts have not been framed in anticipation of traffic by locomotives, and are in many respects ill adapted to the profitable carrying of goods, or to the levying of just and adequate tolls upon waggons or carriages drawn by locomotives: and whereas it is desirable that the use of locomotives on turnpike and other roads should be regulated by uniform general provisions, and that tolls should be levied upon such locomotives, and the waggons or carriages drawn by such locomotives, upon turnpike roads: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. From and after the passing of this act, all trustees, corporations, commissioners, and other persons acting under and in execution of any existing general or local turnpike road act or public bridge act, shall demand and take tolls not exceeding the tolls following: that is to say—

For every locomotive propelled by any power, containing within itself the machinery for its own propulsion, such a toll for every two tons weight, or fractional part of every two tons weight, that such locomotive shall weigh as shall be equal to the toll or tolls by their respective acts made payable for every horse drawing any waggon, wain, cart, or carriage with wheels of a width similar to those of such locomotive; or in the case of a toll by any such act made payable being charged on the horse or horses drawing any such waggon, wain, cart, or carriage, without reference to the width of the wheels thereof, then such a toll for every two tons, or fractional part thereof, that such locomotive shall weigh as shall be equal to one horse drawing such waggon, wain, cart, or carriage; which tolls respectively shall be payable so often as tolls made payable as aforesaid for such waggon, wain, cart, or carriage shall be payable at the same gate: provided always, that if the wheels of such locomotive shall rest upon any shoe or other bearing, the surface of which shall bear upon the ground so as to prevent the wheels coming in contact therewith, such and the same tolls only shall be demanded and payable as if the wheels thereof were of a width similar to such shoe or bearing:

For every waggon, wain, cart, or carriage drawn or propelled by any locomotive, for each pair of wheels thereof such a toll as shall not exceed the toll by their respective acts made payable for two horses drawing any waggon, wain, cart, or carriage with wheels of a similar width, and for every additional wheel thereof one-half toll in addition to the said toll; or in the case of a toll by any such act made payable being charged on the horse or horses drawing any such waggon, wain, cart, or carriage, without reference to the width of the wheels thereof, then such a toll for each wheel as shall be equal to one horse drawing such waggon, wain, cart, or carriage, which said toll or tolls shall be payable so often as the toll made payable as aforesaid for such waggon, wain, cart, or carriage drawn by horses shall be payable at the same gate:

Provided always, that in every case where the wheels of any waggon, wain, cart, or carriage shall not all be cylindrical, as described in the act of the 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 9, the toll payable in respect thereof shall be one-half more.

2. All clauses and provisions in any local or general turnpike road act or public bridge act, authorising tolls to be demanded or taken upon locomotives or carriages drawn by steam or any other than animal power, different to the tolls herein provided for, shall, so far as the same relate to such tolls, be and the same are hereby repealed: provided always, that this enactment shall not be deemed or construed to extend to any tolls authorised to be taken in respect of any private roads or private bridges, or to the roads comprised in the Commercial Roads Continuation Act, 1840.

3. Every locomotive propelled by steam or any other than animal power, not drawing any carriage, and not exceeding in weight three tons, shall have the tires of the wheels thereof not less than three inches in width, and for every ton or fractional part thereof additional weight the tires of the wheels thereof shall be increased one inch in width; and every locomotive drawing any waggon or carriage shall have the tires of the wheels thereof not less than nine inches in width; but no locomotive shall exceed seven feet in width or twelve tons in weight, except as hereinafter provided; and the wheels of every locomotive shall be cylindrical and smooth soled, or used with shoes or other bearing surface of a width not less than nine inches; and the owner or owners of any locomotive used contrary to the foregoing provisions shall for every such offence, on summary conviction, forfeit any sum not exceeding 5*l*.: provided always, that whereas it may be desirable that locomotives of a greater width than seven feet, and of a greater weight than twelve tons, should be allowed to be used under certain circumstances, any person desiring to use any such locomotive on any street or public highway within the city of London or the liberties thereof, or within the limits of the metropolis, as defined by the act of the 18 & 19 Vict., "for the better local management of the metropolis," or within any other city or municipal or parliamentary borough, or on any turnpike road or other public highway, shall apply, within the city of London, to the lord mayor for the time being, or within any municipal or parliamentary borough in Scotland, to the lord provost or other chief magistrate thereof, and in other places, to the corporation, commissioners, trustees, and surveyors, or other persons having the charge of any such street, highway, turnpike, or other road over which it may be proposed to work such locomotive, for permission to use the same; and the said lord mayor, the said lord provost or chief magistrate, or such corporation, commissioners, trustees, surveyors, and other persons as aforesaid, shall have power to authorise such locomotive to be used on such road or roads, or part of any road or roads, and under such condition or conditions as to them may appear desirable; but in the case of the surveyor or surveyors of any highway in England no such permission shall be valid without also it be approved by the justices acting in petty sessions for any petty sessional division within which it is proposed to use such locomotive.

4. It shall not be lawful for any waggon, wain, cart, or other carriage so drawn or propelled as aforesaid, not having cylindrical wheels, to carry any greater weight than is permitted in such waggon, wain, cart, or carriage by the General Turnpike Act; and it shall not be lawful for any waggon, wain, cart, or other carriage having cylindrical wheels to carry, over or above the weight of the waggon, wain, cart, or carriage, any greater weight than one ton and a half for each pair of wheels, unless the felloes, tires, or shoes are four inches or more in breadth; nor to carry a greater weight than two tons for each pair of wheels, unless the felloes, tires, or shoes are six inches or more in breadth; nor to carry a greater weight than three tons for each pair of wheels, unless the felloes, tires, or shoes are eight inches or more in breadth; and for every single wheel, one-half of that permitted to be carried on a pair of wheels; nor in any case to carry a greater weight than four tons on each pair of wheels, or two tons on each wheel; but if such waggons, wains, or other carriages are built and constructed with springs upon each axle, then they shall be allowed to carry one-sixth more weight in addition to the above-mentioned weights upon each pair of wheels: provided always, that the regulation of weight herein mentioned and provided shall not extend to any waggon, wain, cart, or other carriage carrying only one tree, or one log of timber, or one block of stone, or one cable or rope, or one block, plate, roll, or vessel of iron or other metal, or compounded of any two or more metals cast, wrought, or united in one piece.

5. In case it appear to one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State that the use of any particular description of locomotive causes excessive wear and tear of the highways, or is dangerous or inconvenient to the public, or that the use of locomotives generally, or of any particular description of locomotive, is dangerous or inconvenient to the public in certain districts or places, it shall be lawful for such Secretary of State from time to time, by order under his hand, to prohibit the use of any kind or description of locomotive specified in such order on any highway whatsoever, or to prohibit the use of locomotives, or any specified kind or description thereof, on the highways within any place, district, or limit mentioned in such order, or otherwise to restrict the use of locomotives, as circumstances may appear to him to require, and from time to time, by order made as aforesaid, to revoke or alter any such order previously made; and every order made under this enactment shall be published in the London Gazette, and any person using any locomotive contrary to any such order shall, for every such offence, on summary conviction thereof before two justices, forfeit any sum not exceeding 10*l*.

6. 8. Construction of act.

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Municipal Corporations Act Amendment Act, 1861."

2. Whereas by the 57th section of the principal act it is provided that the mayor for the time being of every borough shall be a justice of the peace of and for such borough, and shall continue to be such justice of the peace during the next succeeding year after he has ceased to be mayor, unless disqualified as thereinbefore mentioned; and that such mayor shall, during the time of his mayoralty, have precedence in all places within the borough: it is hereby enacted, that the mayor of every borough shall, during the time of his mayoralty, have precedence over all justices of the peace acting in and for such borough, and be entitled to take the chair at all meetings of justices held within the borough at which he may be present by virtue of his office of mayor, subject to these provisos: firstly, that the mayor of a borough shall not by virtue of this section have any precedence over the justices of the peace acting in and for the county, riding, or division of a county in which any such borough is situate, unless when acting in relation to the business of such borough, or over any stipendiary magistrate engaged in administering justice; and, secondly, that by virtue of this section the mayor of Cambridge shall not have any precedence over the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, and the mayor of Oxford shall not have any precedence over the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford.

4. Whereas by the 98th section of the principal act it is provided that her Majesty's commission may be issued to certain persons to act as justices of the peace in and for each of the several boroughs therein mentioned: and whereas doubts have arisen whether boroughs having separate commissions of the peace, but not having separate courts of quarter sessions, are "towns corporate" within the meaning of the act 9 Geo. 4, sess. 2, c. 61, intituled "An Act to regulate the granting of Licences to Keepers of Inns, Alehouses, and Victualling Houses in England," so as to give the justices of such boroughs control over the granting or withdrawing licenses, and it is desirable that such doubts should be removed: it is hereby declared, that in the construction of the last-mentioned act the words "town corporate," and the words "county or place," and the words "division or place," include every borough in England having a separate commission of the peace, although it may not have a separate court of quarter sessions; and that the words "high constable," where used in the same act, include any constable of any such borough to whom the justices of the same borough may direct their precept or precepts under the same act; and that all licenses hitherto granted and all transfers of licenses hitherto made in pursuance of the same act, or of the act of the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44, or any other act, by the justices of any such borough, are hereby declared to be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes.

rectly interested or employed in the prosecution of any offender committed for trial by the justices of whom he shall be such clerk as aforesaid, or any of them, at any court of gaol delivery, or general or quarter sessions; and that any person being an alderman or councillor, or clerk of the peace of any borough, or the partner or clerk, or in the employ of such clerk of the peace, who shall act as clerk to the justices of such borough, or shall otherwise offend in the premises, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 100l. as therein mentioned: and whereas the said provisions have been found to be insufficient for preventing the mischief thereby intended to be prevented: it is hereby enacted, that the said provisions of the 102nd section of the principal act shall be repealed; and from and after the passing of this act it shall not be lawful for the justices of any borough to appoint or continue as their clerk any alderman or councillor of such borough, or the clerk of the peace of such borough or of the county in which such borough is situate, or the partner of any such clerk of the peace; and it shall not be lawful for the clerk to the justices of any borough, by himself or his partner, or otherwise, to be directly or indirectly employed or interested in the prosecution of any offender committed for trial by the justices of such borough, or any of them, at any court of gaol delivery, or general or quarter sessions; and any person who shall in anywise offend in the premises shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 100l., one moiety thereof to the treasurer of such borough, to be paid over to the credit and account of the borough fund, and the other moiety thereof, with costs of suit, to any person who may sue for the same in any of her Majesty's courts of record at Westminster: provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent the justices of any borough re-appointing as their clerk any clerk of the peace or partner of such clerk of the peace of their borough, or of the county in which such borough is situate, who at the time of the passing of this act shall be, or who shall not at the time of such re-appointment have ceased to be, the clerk of such justices.

6. Whereas by the 4th section of an act passed in the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 56, intituled "An Act to amend an Act of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 63, relating to Weights and Measures," certain powers of appointing inspectors of weights and measures are conferred on the town councils of all municipal boroughs in England and Wales incorporated under the provisions of the principal act, to which a separate court of quarter sessions has been granted: and whereas it is expedient to extend such provisions to the town councils of all municipal boroughs in England and Wales having a separate commission of the peace, although they may not have a separate court of quarter sessions: it is hereby enacted, that all the provisions of the said 4th section shall extend to boroughs having a separate commission of the peace, in the same manner as if such boroughs were therein included under the description of "boroughs to which a separate court of quarter sessions has been granted."

7. Nothing in this act contained shall affect the Manchester Division Stipendiary Act, 1864, or any provision therein contained.

30. Where, upon the appointment of a new trustee, the property which is the subject of one and the same settlement, or of trusts created for the benefit of the same parties, is of various kinds or descriptions, or is held under different titles, and it is necessary or desirable that it should be conveyed to or vested in the trustee by means of several deeds or instruments, or where, upon any such appointment, several deeds or instruments are made or executed for the purpose only of transferring to and vesting in the trustee the same trust property, if in any of such cases one of the deeds or instruments shall be stamped with the duty of 1*l*. 15*s*., it shall be sufficient if the others or other shall be stamped with the duty that would by law be chargeable on a duplicate or counterpart thereof; and on all the deeds or instruments being produced, duly stamped accordingly, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, on being satisfied as to the facts, to impress the deeds or instruments, not having the duty of 1*l*. 15*s*. thereon, with a particular stamp, to denote the payment of such duty on some other instrument.

31. Whereas, by an act passed in the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, certain stamp duties were imposed on a duplicate or counterpart of any deed or instrument chargeable with stamp duty under that act, or any act then in force, and also certain progressive duties on any such deed or instrument, the said duties respectively being regulated by the amount of stamp duty otherwise chargeable on such last-mentioned deed or instrument, and on the original deed or instrument, in the case of a duplicate or counterpart: for disposing of doubts as to the duties chargeable on any such duplicate or counterpart, and the progressive duties on any deed or instrument, where, by any act since passed or hereafter to be passed, stamp duties, not being progressive duties, have been or may be granted or imposed on any deed or instrument, be it enacted, that the progressive duties payable on any such last-mentioned deed or instrument, and the stamp duties on any duplicate or counterpart thereof, shall, in the absence of any express provision in that behalf, be the same as would have been payable if the stamp duties on such deed or instrument had been imposed or granted by the aforesaid act of the 13 & 14 Vict.

32. In any case where, under any act of Parliament now or hereafter in force, it is or shall be competent to or incumbent upon any person or persons to affix to any instrument chargeable with stamp duty an adhesive stamp to denote such duty, and to cancel the same, it shall be lawful for any officer of Inland Revenue, duly authorised by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue in that behalf, on any such instrument being produced to him, to affix thereto the proper adhesive stamp, and to cancel the same by any means the commissioners may think proper; and thereupon the said instrument shall be deemed to be as well and sufficiently stamped as if the stamp had been affixed and cancelled by the person or persons allowed or required by law to affix and cancel the same, and as if the instrument had been impressed with a stamp denoting the same amount of duty as the stamp so affixed: provided that nothing herein contained shall authorise the stamping of any instrument not allowed by law to be stamped after it is made, signed, or issued, or after the expiration of any period by law limited for stamping the same, nor in any way alter or affect the law requiring the payment of a penalty on the stamping of any such instrument.

33. In any case where an adhesive stamp used for denoting any stamp duty is required by law to be cancelled by any person, by writing thereon his name, or the name of his firm, it shall be sufficient if, instead of the name in full, the initials thereof shall be so written, or shall be stamped or impressed in ink thereon, together with any other particulars specially required by law to be written thereon, provided that by means thereof the stamp shall be effectually obliterated and cancelled, so as not to admit of its being used again, anything in any act to the contrary notwithstanding; and where the adhesive stamp on any foreign bill or promissory note shall, on such bill or note being received by any person who shall be or become the bona fide holder thereof, be effectually obliterated, and shall purport and appear to be duly cancelled, the same shall, so far as relates to such holder, be deemed to be sufficiently cancelled: provided that where any such bill or note, when so received by any such person as last aforesaid, shall have affixed thereto a proper and sufficient adhesive stamp, but such stamp shall not be duly cancelled, it shall be competent to the holder to cancel the same as if he were the person first negotiating the bill or note; and upon his so doing such bill or note shall be deemed to be duly stamped, and shall be as valid and as available by such holder, and any prior or subsequent holder, as it would have been if the stamp had been affixed and cancelled, as by law required, by the first holder, anything in any act to the contrary notwithstanding; but nothing herein contained shall relieve any person who ought to cancel such stamp from any penalty incurred by not cancelling the same as required by law.

34. No copy of any bill of sale of personal chattels shall be filed in any court unless the original shall be produced to the proper officer with whom the copy is to be filed, duly stamped with the duty to which the same may be liable; and no deed or instrument liable to stamp duty shall be registered until the same is duly stamped.

35. Whereas the licenses and certificates granted to bankers and persons acting as bankers in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, by or under the authority of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, are required by law to specify, amongst other things, the names and places of abode of all the persons composing the respective companies or partnerships to whom they are granted: be it enacted, that in any case where a company or co-partnership of bankers consists of more than six persons it shall be sufficient to specify in any such license or certificate the names and places of abode of any six or more of such persons who may be presented to the commissioners or their officer, or whom they or he may select for the purpose, and to grant the license or certificate to them as and for the whole of the company or co-partnership, or otherwise to specify only the name or style of the company or co-partnership, and to grant the license or certificate to such company or co-partnership in and by the said name or style, as the commissioners or their officer shall think fit; and every such license and certificate respectively shall be as good, valid, and available as if the names and places of abode of all the members of the company or co-partnership had been specified therein, and the license had been granted to them, anything in any act of Parliament to the contrary notwithstanding; but this shall not in any way alter or affect the provisions of any act of Parliament whereby any banking company or co-partnership is required to make any account or return of the names and places of abode of all the members or partners of such company or co-partnership, and any other particulars relating thereto.

36. The provision made by the act passed in the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 80, s. 2, and the act passed in the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 34, s. 10, for the assessing and charging the income tax on interest, dividends, or other annual payments payable out of or in respect of the stocks, funds, or shares of any foreign company, society, adventure, or concern, shall be and the same is hereby extended and shall be applied to the assessing and charging of the income tax on all interest, dividends, or other annual payments payable out of or in respect of the stocks, funds, or shares of any colonial company, society, adventure, or concern, and in respect of any securities given by or on account of any such colonial company, society, adventure, or concern, and which said interest, dividends, or annual payments have been or shall be intrusted to any person in the United Kingdom for payment to any persons, corporations, companies, or societies in the United Kingdom; and for this purpose the said sect. 10 of the last-mentioned act and this enactment shall be read and construed together as one enactment, in like manner as if the words "or colonial" had been inserted and contained in the said sect. 10, immediately after the word "foreign," used therein with reference to any company, society, adventure, or concern.

37. In any case in which an assessment shall be made under Schedule (D.) of the acts relating to the income tax, and the party assessed shall within the year of assessment cease to carry on the concern in respect of which the assessment shall be made, and shall be succeeded therein by another person, it shall be lawful for the inspector or surveyor of the district within which the change may take place, at any time before the expiration of three calendar months from the 5th day of April next after such change, to certify to the commissioners for the district in which the assessment shall have been made the particulars thereof, and the Christian and surname and place of residence of the person assessed, and of the successor to the concern, and also the date of the change in the carrying on of the said concern, if the same shall be known to the said inspector or surveyor; and upon the receipt of such certificate the commissioners shall cause notice to be given to the respective parties of a time and place appointed for a meeting of commissioners for considering the same; and the commissioners shall, upon the examination of the respective parties, if in attendance, or upon such other proof of the facts as may be satisfactory to the said commissioners, adjust and apportion the assessment by charging the successor with a fair proportion thereof from the period of his succeeding to the concern and relieving the person originally assessed from a like amount.

38. The determination of the commissioners upon any such certificate shall be final, and the assessment so adjusted shall be recoverable from the respective parties in like manner as an original assessment; provided that if in any case either of the said parties shall have paid, in respect of any assessment so certified, more than the proportion which shall appear by the determination of the commissioners to be chargeable on him, then the amount which shall have been so overpaid shall, when recovered from the party liable, be paid to the person by whom the overpayment may have been made.

As to Land Tax.

39. And whereas an act was passed in the 6 Geo. 4. c. 32, to provide for the application of monies arising from the excess or surplus of land tax assessed in certain cases beyond the quota or proportion payable by the several parishes or places in Great Britain respectively, and it is expedient to make further and other provision for the application of such monies for the benefit of such respective parishes or places: be it enacted, that in every case where the assessment made or to be made and allowed under the provisions of the acts relating to the land tax, for or upon any parish or place in any district or division in Great Britain, shall exceed by any amount or sum whatever the quota or proportion payable to her Majesty by or for such parish or place under the provisions of the said acts, the excess or surplus which shall be collected over and above the said quota shall be accounted for and paid in the due and ordinary course of collection to the Receiver-General of Inland Revenue, and shall be by him paid into the Bank of England to the credit of an account to be opened in the books of the said Bank with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and to be intitled "The Account of Surplus Land Tax;" and the Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall cause to be opened and kept in the books of the Inland Revenue Office at Somerset-house an account with every such parish and place respectively, and in every such last-mentioned account shall be entered the sums of money from time to time collected from every such respective parish and place, and paid to the said Receiver-General as such surplus land tax as aforesaid.

Whenever the amount of such surplus land tax standing to the credit of any parish or place in any such account as last mentioned shall be sufficient, according to the rules established by law for computing the consideration money for the redemption of land tax, to redeem the sum of 3*l.* land tax, or to redeem the whole of the land tax chargeable on such parish or place, if the same shall be less than 3*l.*, the Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall certify that fact to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, who shall thereupon apply and appropriate in the purchase and cancelling of parliamentary stocks or annuities such sum of the monies standing in their names to the credit of the said account of surplus land tax as the said Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall certify to them to be a sufficient consideration, computed according to the rules aforesaid, for the redemption of the amount of land tax mentioned in their certificate as intended to be redeemed thereby.

41. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue, having transmitted such certificate as aforesaid to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, shall cause the parish or place named in the said certificate to be debited in the surplus land tax account in the books of the Inland Revenue Office with the sum specified in the said certificate as the sum to be applied in the redemption of land tax chargeable upon such parish or place, and the said Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall also certify to the Commissioners of Land Tax for the district or division in which the said parish or place is situated that the said sum has been so applied, and also the amount of land tax redeemed thereby, and thereupon the said parish or place shall stand exonerated and discharged from the said amount of land tax from such of the quarterly days for payment of land tax as shall next precede the day of the date of the last-mentioned certificate; and the said last-mentioned certificate shall be registered in the books of the proper officer for the registration of land tax redeemed.

42. So much of the said act of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 32, as enacts or directs that the surplus land tax arising in any parish or place shall be applied or appropriated in any other manner than as by this act is directed, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

43. Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to repeal the 6th section of the act passed in the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 60, or to prevent the Commissioners of Land Tax from deducting from the surplus land tax which shall arise in any parish or place, before payment thereof to the Receiver-General of Inland Revenue, such sum or sums of money as by or under the said last-mentioned enactment are or may be directed or authorised to be paid to the assessors of such parish or place as a remuneration for their trouble in making the assessments to the land tax.

44. The term "parish or place," used in this act with reference to land tax, shall include and be construed to mean any city, borough, town, parish, ward, or place.

As to Land, Assessed, and Income Taxes.

45. Every collector of any of the said taxes shall, upon clearing his account for any of such taxes, deliver to the commissioners by whom he was appointed the duplicate of the assessment for the year and tax to which such account relates, together with the books or book of receipts and counterfoils furnished for his use in the collection of such taxes, or in default thereof he shall forfeit the sum of 5*l.*

46. #### As to Apprehension of Offenders, and other Proceedings.

103. Any person found committing any offence punishable, either upon indictment or upon summary conviction, by virtue of this act, except only the offence of angling in the daytime, may be immediately apprehended, without a warrant, by any person, and forthwith taken, together with such property, if any, before some neighbouring justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law; and if any credible witness shall prove, upon oath before a justice of the peace, a reasonable cause to suspect that any person has in his possession, or on his premises, any property whatsoever, on or with respect to which any offence, punishable either upon indictment or upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, shall have been committed, the justice may grant a warrant to search for such property, as in the case of stolen goods; and any person to whom any property shall be offered to be sold, pawned, or delivered if he shall have reasonable cause to suspect that any such offence has been committed on or with respect to such property, is hereby authorised, and, in his power, is required to apprehend and forthwith to take before a justice of the peace the party offering the same, together with such property, to be dealt with according to law.

104. Any constable or peace officer may take into custody, without warrant, any person whom he shall find lying or loitering in any highway, yard, or other place, during the night, and whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed, or being about to commit, any felony against this act, and shall take such person, as soon as reasonably may be, before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law.

105. Where any person shall be charged on the oath of a credible witness, before any justice of the peace, with any offence punishable on summary conviction under this Act, the justice may summon the person charged to appear at a time and place to be named in such summons, and if he shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of the due service of the summons upon such person, by delivering the same to him personally, or by leaving the same at his usual place of abode), the justice may either proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte, or issue his warrant for apprehending such person, and bringing him before himself or some other justice of the peace; or the justice before whom the charge shall be made may (if he shall so think fit), without any previous summons (unless where otherwise specially directed), issue such warrant, and the justice before whom the person charged shall appear or be brought shall proceed to hear and determine the case.

106. Every sum of money which shall be forfeited on any summary conviction for the value of any property stolen as taken, or for the amount of any injury done (such value or amount to be assessed in each case by the convicting justice), shall be paid to the party aggrieved, except where he is unknown, and in that case such sum shall be applied in the same manner as a penalty; and every sum which shall be imposed as a penalty by any justice of the peace, whether in addition to such value or amount or otherwise, shall be paid and applied in the same manner as other penalties recoverable before justices of the peace are to be paid and applied in cases where the statute imposing the same contains no direction for the payment thereof to any person: provided, that where several persons shall join in the commission of the same offence, and shall, upon conviction thereof, each be adjudged to forfeit a sum equivalent to the value of the property or to the amount of the injury, in every such case no further sum shall be paid to the party aggrieved than such value or amount; and the remaining sum or sums forfeited shall be applied in the same manner as any penalty imposed by a justice of the peace is heretofore directed to be applied.

107. In every case of a summary conviction under this act, where the sum which shall be forfeited for the value of the property stolen or taken, or for the amount of the injury done, or which shall be imposed as a penalty by the justice, shall not be paid, either immediately after the conviction, or within such period as the justice shall at the time of the conviction, appoint, the convicting justice (unless where otherwise specially directed) may commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, according to the discretion of the justice, for any term not exceeding two months, where the amount of the sum forfeited or of the penalty imposed, or of both (as the case may be), together with the costs, shall not exceed 5*l*., and for any term not exceeding four months where the amount, with costs, shall not exceed 10*l*., and for any term not exceeding six months in any other case, the commitment to be determinable in each of the cases aforesaid upon payment of the amount and costs.

108. Where any person, shall be summarily convicted before a justice of the peace of any offence against this act, and it shall be a first conviction the justice may, if he shall so think fit, discharge the offender from his conviction, upon his making such satisfaction to the party aggrieved for damages and costs, or either of them, as shall be ascertained by the justice.

109. In case any person, convicted of any offence punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, shall have paid the sum adjudged to be paid, together with costs, under such conviction, or shall have received a remission thereof from the Crown, or from the Lord-Lieutenant or other chief governor in Ireland, or shall have suffered the imprisonment awarded for non-payment thereof, or the imprisonment adjudged in the first instance, or shall have been so discharged from his conviction by any justice as aforesaid, in every such case he shall be released from all further or other proceedings for the same cause.

110. In all cases where the sum adjudged to be paid on any summary conviction shall exceed 5*l*., or the imprisonment adjudged shall exceed one month, or the conviction shall take place before one justice only, any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any such conviction may appeal to the next court of general or quarter sessions which shall be holden not less than twelve days after the day of such conviction for the county or place wherein the cause of complaint shall have arisen; provided that such person shall give to the complainant a notice in writing of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, within three days after such conviction, and seven clear days at the least before such sessions, and shall also either remain in custody until the sessions or shall enter into a recognisance, with two sufficient sureties, before a justice of the peace, conditioned personally to appear at the said sessions and to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the court awarded, or, if such appeal shall be against any conviction, whereby only a penalty or other sum of money shall be adjudged to be paid, shall deposit with the clerk of the convicting justice such a sum of money as such justice shall deem to be sufficient to cover the sum so adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the conviction and the costs of the appeal; and upon such notice being given, and such recognisance being entered into, or such deposit being made, the justice before whom such recognisance shall be entered into or such deposit shall be made shall liberate such person, if in custody; and the court at such sessions shall hear and determine the matter of the appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs to either party, as to the court shall seem meet, and in case of the dismissal of the appeal, or the affirmation of the conviction, shall order and adjudge the offender to be punished according to the conviction, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded, and shall, if necessary, issue process for enforcing such judgment; and in any case where, after any such deposit shall have been made as aforesaid, the conviction shall be affirmed, the court may order the sum thereby adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the conviction and the costs of the appeal, to be paid out of the money deposited, and the residue thereof, if any, to be repaid to the party convicted; and in any case where, after any such deposit, the conviction shall be quashed, the court shall order the money deposited to be repaid to the party convicted; and in every case where any conviction shall be quashed on appeal as aforesaid, the clerk of the peace or other proper officer shall forthwith indorse on the conviction a memorandum that the same has been so quashed; and whenever any copy or certificate of such conviction shall be made, a copy of such memorandum shall be added thereto, and shall be sufficient evidence that the conviction has been quashed in every case where such copy or certificate would be sufficient evidence of such conviction.

111. No such conviction, or adjudication made on appeal therefrom, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari into any of her Majesty's superior courts of record; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same.

112. Every justice of the peace before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against this act shall transmit the conviction to the next court of general or quarter sessions which shall be holden for the county or place wherein the offence shall have been committed, there to be kept by the proper officer among the records of the court; and upon any information against any person for a subsequent offence, a copy of such conviction, certified by the proper officer of the court, or proved to be a true copy, shall be sufficient evidence to prove a conviction for the former offence, and the conviction shall be presumed to have been unappealed against until the contrary be shown.

113. All actions and prosecutions to be commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance of this act shall be laid and tried in the county where the fact was committed, and shall be commenced within six months after the fact committed, and not otherwise; and notices in writing of such action, and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one month at least before the commencement of the action; and in any such action the defendant may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence, at any trial to be had thereupon; and no plaintiff shall recover in any such action if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made before such action brought, or if a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court after such action brought, by or on behalf of the defendant; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or discontinue any such action after issue joined, or if, upon demurres or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall recover his full costs as between attorney and client, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant has by law in other cases; and though a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff in any such action, such plaintiff shall not have costs against the defendant unless the judge before whom the trial shall be shall certify his approbation of the action.

As to other Matters.

114. If any person shall have in his possession in any one part of the United Kingdom any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, which he shall have stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part of the United Kingdom, he may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished for larceny or theft in that part of the United Kingdom where he shall so have such property, in the same manner as if he had actually stolen or taken it in that part; and if any person in any one part of the United Kingdom shall receive or have any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever which shall have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken in any other part of the United Kingdom, such person knowing such property to have been stolen or otherwise feloniously taken, he may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished for such offence in that part of the United Kingdom where he shall so receive or have such property, in the same manner as if it had been originally stolen or taken in that part.

115. All indictable offences mentioned in this act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature, and liable to the same punishments, as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in any county or place in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody; and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being an accessory to any such offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence itself shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas;" provided, that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of her Majesty's land or naval forces.

116. In any indictment for any offence punishable under this act, and committed after a previous conviction or convictions for any felony, misdemeanour, or offence or offences punishable upon summary conviction, it shall be sufficient, after charging the subsequent offence, to state that the offender was at a certain time and place, or at certain times and places, convicted of felony, or of an indictable misdemeanour, or of an offence or offences punishable upon summary conviction (as the case may be), without otherwise describing the previous felony, misdemeanour, offence, or offences; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous felony or misdemeanour, or a copy of any such summary conviction, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or to which such summary conviction shall have been returned, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer (for which certificate or copy a fee of 5s., and no more, shall be demanded or taken), shall, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of such conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same; and the proceedings upon any indictment for committing any offence after a previous conviction or convictions shall be as follows; that is to say, the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned upon so much only of the indictment as charges the subsequent offence, and if he plead not guilty, or if the court order a plea of not guilty to be entered on his behalf, the jury shall be charged, in the first instance, to inquire concerning such subsequent offence only; and if they find him guilty, or if on arraignment he plead guilty, he shall then, and not before, be asked whether he had been previously convicted as alleged in the indictment; and if he answer that he had been so previously convicted, the court may proceed to sentence him accordingly; but if he deny that he had been so previously convicted, or stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to such question, the jury shall then be charged to inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions, and in such case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again, but the oath already taken by them shall for all purposes be deemed to extend to such last-mentioned inquiry; provided, that if upon the trial of any person for any such subsequent offence such person shall give evidence of his good character, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor, in answer thereto, to give evidence of the conviction of such person for the previous offence or offences before such verdict of guilty shall be returned, and the jury shall inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions at the same time that they inquire concerning such subsequent offence.

117. Whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanour punishable under this act, the court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this act authorised, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognisances and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and, in case of any felony punishable under this act the court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognisances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this act authorised; provided, that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause for not finding sureties for any period exceeding one year.

118. Whenever imprisonment, with or without hard labour, may be awarded for any indictable offence under this act, the court may, in addition to or in lieu of such imprisonment, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction.

119. Whenever solitary confinement may be awarded for any indictable offence under this act, the court may direct the offender to be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of his imprisonment, or of his imprisonment with hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year; and whenever whipping may be awarded for any indictable offence under this act, the court may sentence the offender to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted shall be specified by the court in the sentence.

120. Every offence hereby made punishable on summary conviction may be prosecuted in England in the manner directed by the act of the session holden in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, so far as no provision is hereby made for any matter or thing which may be required to be done in the course of such prosecution, and may be prosecuted in Ireland before two or more justices of the peace, or one metropolitan or stipendiary magistrate, in the manner directed by the act of the session holden in the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, or in such other manner as may be directed by any act that may be passed for like purposes; and all provisions contained in the said acts shall be applicable to such prosecutions in the same manner as if they were incorporated in this act; provided, that nothing in this act contained shall in any manner alter or affect any enactment relating to procedure in the case of any offence punishable on summary conviction within the city of London or the metropolitan police district, or the recovery or application of any penalty or forfeiture for any such offence.

121. The court before which any indictable misdemeanour against this act shall be prosecuted or tried may allow the costs of the prosecution in the same manner as in cases of felony; and every order for the payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein paid and repaid, upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony.

122. Nothing in this act contained shall extend to Scotland, except as hereinbefore otherwise expressly provided.

123. This act shall commence and take effect on the 1st day of November, 1861.

53. The provisions in the last preceding section contained shall extend to any person who shall wilfully or maliciously commit any injury to any tree, sapling, shrub, or underwood, for which no punishment is hereinbefore provided.

Making Gunpowder to commit Offences, and searching for the same.

54. Whosoever shall make or manufacture, or knowingly have in his possession, any gunpowder or other explosive substance, or any dangerous or noxious thing, or any machine, engine, instrument, or thing, with intent thereby or by means thereof to commit, or for the purpose of enabling any other person to commit, any of the felonies in this act mentioned, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, and, if a male under the age of sixteen years, with or without whipping.

55. Any justice of the peace of any county or place in which any machine, engine, implement, or thing, or any gunpowder or other explosive, dangerous, or noxious substance, is suspected to be made, kept, or carried for the purpose of being used in committing any of the felonies in this act mentioned, upon reasonable cause assigned upon oath by any person, may issue a warrant under his hand and seal for searching in the daytime any house, mill, magazine, storehouse, warehouse, shop, cellar, yard, wharf, or other place, or any carriage, waggon, cart, ship, boat, or vessel, in which the same is suspected to be made, kept, or carried for such purpose as hereinbefore mentioned; and every person acting in the execution of any such warrant shall have, for seizing, removing to proper places, and detaining every such machine, engine, implement, and thing, and all such gunpowder, explosive, dangerous, or noxious substances found upon such search, which he shall have good cause to suspect to be intended to be used in committing any such offence, and the barrels, packages, cases, and other receptacles in which the same shall be, the same powers and protections which are given to persons searching for unlawful quantities of gunpowder under the warrant of a justice by the act passed in the session holden in the 23 & 24 Viet. c. 139, intimated "An Act to amend the Law concerning the making, keeping, and Carriage of Gunpowder and Compositions of an explosive Nature, and concerning the Manufacture, Sale, and Use of Fireworks."

Other Matters.

56. In the case of every felony punishable under this act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this act shall on conviction be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement; and every person who shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any misdemeanour punishable under this act shall be liable to be proceeded against, indicted, and punished as a principal offender.

67. Any constable or peace officer may take into custody, without warrant, any person whom he shall find lying or loitering in any highway, yard, or other place during the night, and whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed, or being about to commit, any felony against this act, and shall take such person as soon as reasonably may be before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law.

68. Every punishment and forfeiture by this act imposed on any person maliciously committing any offence, whether the same be punishable upon indictment or upon summary conviction, shall equally apply and be enforced, whether the offence shall be committed from malice conceived against the owner of the property in respect of which it shall be committed or otherwise.

69. Every provision of this act not hereinbefore so applied shall apply to every person who, with intent to injure or defraud any other person, shall do any of the acts hereinbefore made penal, although the offender shall be in possession of the property against or in respect of which such act shall be done.

70. It shall be sufficient, in any indictment for any offence against this act, where it shall be necessary to allege an intent to injure or defraud, to allege that the party accused did the act with intent to injure or defraud, as the case may be, without alleging an intent to injure or defraud any particular person; and on the trial of any such offence it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to injure or defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove that the party accused did the act charged with an intent to injure or defraud, as the case may be.

71. Any person found committing any offence against this act, whether the same be punishable upon indictment or upon summary conviction, may be immediately apprehended, without a warrant, by any peace officer, or the owner of the property injured, or his servant, or any person authorised by him, and forthwith taken before some neighbouring justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law.

72. Where any person shall be charged, on the oath of a credible witness, before any justice of the peace, with any offence punishable on summary conviction under this act, the justice may summon the person charged to appear at a time and place to be named in such summons; and if he shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of the due service of the summons upon such person, by delivering the same to him personally, or by leaving the same at his usual place of abode) the justice may either proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte, or issue his warrant for apprehending such person, and bringing him before himself or some other justice of the peace; or the justice before whom the charge shall be made may, if he shall so think fit, without any previous summons, unless where otherwise specially directed, issue such warrant; and the justice before whom the person charged shall appear or be brought shall proceed to hear and determine the case.

73. Whosoever shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any offence which is by this act punishable on summary conviction, either for every time of its commission, or for the first and second time only, or for the first time only, shall, on conviction before a justice of the peace, be liable, for every first, second, or subsequent offence of aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring, to the same forfeiture and punishment to which a person guilty of a first, second, or subsequent offence as a principal offender is by this act made liable.

74. Every sum of money which shall be forfeited for the amount of any injury done shall be assessed in each case by the convicting justice, and shall be paid to the party aggrieved, except where he is unknown, and in that case such sum shall be applied in the same manner as a penalty; and every sum which shall be imposed as a penalty by any justice of the peace, whether in addition to such amount or otherwise, shall be paid and applied in the same manner as other penalties recoverable before justices of the peace are to be paid and applied in cases where the statute imposing the same contains no directions for the payment thereof to any person: provided that where several persons shall join in the commission of the same offence, and shall, upon conviction thereof, each be adjudged to forfeit a sum equivalent to the amount of the injury done, in every such case no further sum shall be paid to the party aggrieved than such value or amount, and the remaining sum or sums forfeited shall be applied in the same manner as any penalty imposed by a justice of the peace is hereinbefore directed to be applied.

75. In every case of a summary conviction under this act, where the sum which shall be forfeited for the amount of the injury done, or which shall be imposed as a penalty by the justice, shall not be paid either immediately after the conviction, or within such period as the justice shall, at the time of the conviction, appoint, the convicting justice (unless where otherwise specially directed) may commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, according to the discretion of the justice, for any term not exceeding two months, where the amount of the sum forfeited, or of the penalty imposed, or of both (as the case may be), together with the costs, shall not exceed 5*l.*; and for any term not exceeding four months where the amount, with costs, shall not exceed 10*l.*; and for any term not exceeding six months in any other case; the commitment to be determinable in each of the cases aforesaid upon payment of the amount and costs.

76. Where any person shall be summarily convicted before a justice of the peace of any offence against this act, and it shall be a first conviction, the justice may, if he shall so think fit, discharge the offender from his conviction upon his making such satisfaction to the party aggrieved, for damages and costs, or either of them, as shall be ascertained by the justice.

77. When any person convicted of any offences punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this act shall have paid the sum adjudged to be paid, together with costs, under such conviction, or shall have received a remission thereof from the Crown, or the Lord-Lieutenant or other chief governor of Ireland, or shall have suffered the imprisonment awarded for non-payment thereof, or the imprisonment awarded in the first instance, or shall have been so discharged from his conviction by any justice as aforesaid, he shall be released from all further or other proceedings for the same cause.

78. In all cases where the sum adjudged to be paid on any summary conviction shall exceed 5*l.*, or the imprisonment adjudged shall exceed one month, or the conviction shall take place before one justice only, any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any such conviction may appeal to the next court of general or quarter sessions, which shall be holden not less than twelve days after the day of such conviction, for the county or place wherein the cause of complaint shall have arisen; provided that such person shall give to the complainant a notice in writing of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, within three days after such conviction, and seven clear days at the least before such sessions, and shall also either remain in custody until the sessions, or shall enter into a recognisance, with two sufficient sureties, before a justice of the peace, conditioned personally to appear at the said sessions and to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the court awarded; or, if such appeal shall be against any conviction whereby only a penalty or sum of money shall be adjudged to be paid, shall deposit with the clerk of the convicting justice such a sum of money as such justice shall deem to be sufficient to cover the sum so adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the conviction and the costs of the appeal; and upon such notice being given, and such recognisance being entered into, or such deposit being made, the justice before whom such recognisance shall be entered into, or such deposit shall be made, shall liberate such person if in custody; and the court at such sessions shall hear and determine the matter of the appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs to either party, as to the court shall seem meet; and, in case of the dismissal of the appeal, or the affirmation of the conviction, shall order and adjudge the offender to be punished according to the conviction, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded, and shall, if necessary, issue process for enforcing such judgment; and in any case where, after any such deposit shall have been made as aforesaid, the conviction shall be affirmed, the court may order the sum thereby adjudged to be paid, together with the costs of the conviction and the costs of the appeal, to be paid out of the money deposited, and the residue thereof, if any, to be repaid to the party convicted; and in any case where, after any such deposit, the conviction shall be quashed, the court shall order the money deposited to be repaid to the party convicted; and in every case where any conviction shall be quashed on appeal as aforesaid, the clerk of the peace or other proper officer shall forthwith indorse on the conviction a memorandum that the same has been quashed; and whenever any copy or certificate of such conviction shall be made, a copy of such memorandum shall be added thereto, and shall be sufficient evidence that the conviction has been quashed, in every case where such copy or certificate would be sufficient evidence of such conviction.

69. No such conviction, or adjudication made on appeal therefrom, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari into any of her Majesty's superior courts of record; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same.

70. Every justice of the peace before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against this act shall transmit the conviction to the next court of general or quarter sessions which shall be holden for the county or place wherein the offence shall have been committed, there to be kept by the proper officer among the records of the court; and upon any indictment or information against any person for a subsequent offence, a copy of such conviction, certified by the proper officer of the court, or proved to be a true copy, shall be sufficient evidence to prove a conviction for the former offence, and the conviction shall be presumed to have been unappealed against until the contrary be shewn.

71. All actions and prosecutions to be commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance of this act shall be laid and tried in the county where the fact was committed, and shall be commenced within six months after the fact committed, and not otherwise; and notice in writing of such action, and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one month at least before the commencement of the action; and in any such action the defendant may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and no plaintiff shall recover in any such action if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made before such action brought, or if a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court after such action brought, by or on behalf of the defendant; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or discontinue any such action after issue joined, or if, upon demurrer or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the defendant shall recover his full costs as between attorney and client, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant has by law in other cases; and though a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff in any such action, such plaintiff shall not have costs against the defendant unless the judge before whom the trial shall be shall certify his approbation of the action.

72. All indictable offences mentioned in this act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature, and liable to the same punishments, as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if they had been actually committed in that county or place; and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being an accessory to such an offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas:" provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of her Majesty's land or naval forces.

73. Whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanour punishable under this act, the court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this act authorised, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognisances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and in case of any felony punishable under this act, the court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognisances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this act authorised: provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause, for not finding sureties, for any period exceeding one year.

74. Whenever imprisonment, with or without hard labour, may be awarded for any indictable offence under this act, the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction.

75. Whenever solitary confinement may be awarded for any indictable offence under this act, the court may direct the offender to be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of his imprisonment, or of his imprisonment with hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year; and whenever whipping may be awarded for any indictable offence under this act, the court may sentence the offender to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes, and the instrument with which they shall be inflicted, shall be specified by the court in the sentence.

76. Every offence hereby made punishable on summary conviction may be prosecuted in England in the manner directed by the act of the session holden in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, so far as no provision is hereby made for any matter or thing which may be required to be done in the course of such prosecution; and may be prosecuted in Ireland before two or more justices of the peace, or one metropolitan or stipendiary magistrate, in the manner directed by the act of the session holden in the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, or in such other manner as may be directed by any act that may be passed for like purposes; and all provisions contained in the said acts shall be applicable to such prosecutions in the same manner as if they were incorporated in this act: provided that nothing in this act contained shall in any manner alter or affect any enactment relating to procedure in the case of any offence punishable on summary conviction within the city of London or the metropolitan police district, or the recovery or application of any penalty or forfeiture for any such offence.

77. The court before which any indictable misdemeanour against this act shall be prosecuted or tried may allow the costs of the prosecution in the same manner as in cases of felony; and every order for the payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein paid and repaid, upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony.

78. Nothing in this act contained shall extend to Scotland, except as hereinbefore otherwise expressly provided.

79. This act shall commence and take effect on the 1st November, 1861.

40. Where the forging or altering any writing or matter whatsoever, or the offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off any writing or matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged or altered, is in this act expressed to be an offence, if any person shall, in England or Ireland, forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any such writing or matter, in whatsoever place or country out of England and Ireland, whether under the dominion of her Majesty or not, such writing or matter may purport to be made or may have been made, and in whatever language the same or any part thereof may be expressed, every such person, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling such person, shall be deemed to be an offender within the meaning of this act, and shall be punishable thereby in the same manner as if the writing or matter had purported to be made or had been made in England or Ireland; and if any person shall in England or Ireland forge or alter, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any bill of exchange, or any promissory note for the payment of money, or any indorsement on or assignment of any bill of exchange or promissory note for the payment of money, or any acceptance of any bill of exchange, or any undertaking, warrant, order, authority, or request for the payment of money, or for the delivery or transfer of any goods or security, or any deed, bond, or writing obligatory for the payment of money (whether such deed, bond, or writing obligatory shall be made only for the payment of money, or for the payment of money together with some other purpose), or any indorsement on or assignment of any such undertaking, warrant, order, authority, request, deed, bond, or writing obligatory, in whatsoever place or country out of England and Ireland, whether under the dominion of her Majesty or not, the money payable or secured by such bill, note, undertaking, warrant, order, authority, request, deed, bond, or writing obligatory may be or may purport to be payable, and in whatever language the same respectively, or any part thereof, may be expressed, and whether such bill, note, undertaking, warrant, order, authority, or request be or be not under seal, every such person, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling such person, shall be deemed to be an offender within the meaning of this act, and shall be punishable thereby in the same manner as if the money had been payable, or had purported to be payable, in England or Ireland.

41. If any person shall commit any offence against this act, or shall commit any offence of forging or altering any matter whatsoever, or of offering, uttering, disposing of, or putting off any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged or altered, whether the offence in any such case shall be indictable at common law, or by virtue of any act passed or to be passed, every such offender may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, in any county or place in which he shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if his offence had been actually committed in that county or place; and every accessory before or after the fact to any such offence, if the same be a felony, and every person aiding, abetting, or counselling the commission of any such offence, if the same be a misdemeanour, may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, in any county or place in which he shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if his offence, and the offence of his principal, had been actually committed in such county or place.

42. In any indictment for forging, altering, offering, uttering, disposing, or putting off any instrument, it shall be sufficient to describe such instrument by any name or designation by which the same may be usually known, or by the purport thereof, without setting out any copy or fac-simile thereof, or otherwise describing the same, or the value thereof.

43. In any indictment for engraving or making the whole or any part of any instrument, matter, or thing whatsoever, or for using or having the unlawful custody or possession of any plate or other material upon which the whole or any part of any instrument, matter, or thing whatsoever shall have been engraved or made, or for having the unlawful custody or possession of any paper upon which the whole or any part of any instrument, matter, or thing whatsoever shall have been made or printed, it shall be sufficient to describe such instrument, matter, or thing by any name or designation by which the same may be usually known, without setting out any copy or fac-simile of the whole or any part of such instrument, matter, or thing.

44. It shall be sufficient, in any indictment for forging, altering, uttering, offering, disposing of, or putting off any instrument whatsoever, where it shall be necessary to allege an intent to defraud, to allege that the party accused did the act with intent to defraud, without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person; and on the trial of any such offence it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove that the party accused did the act charged with an intent to defraud.

45. Where the having any matter in the custody or possession of any person is in this act expressed to be an offence, if any person shall have any such matter in his personal custody or possession, or shall knowingly and wilfully have any such matter in the actual custody or possession of any other person, or shall knowingly and wilfully have any such matter in any dwelling-house or other building, lodging, apartment, field, or other place, open or inclosed, whether belonging to or occupied by himself or not, and whether such matter shall be so had for his own use or for the use or benefit of another, every such person shall be deemed and taken to have such matter in his custody or possession within the meaning of this act.

46. If it shall be made to appear, by information on oath or affirmation before a justice of the peace, that there is reasonable cause to believe that any person has in his custody or possession, without lawful authority or excuse, any note or bill of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England or Ireland, or of any body corporate, company, or person carrying on the business of bankers, or any frame, mould, or implement for making paper in imitation of the paper used for such notes or bills, or any such paper, or any plate, wood, stone, or other material having thereon any words, forms, devices, or characters capable of producing or intended to produce the impression of any such note or bill, or any part thereof, or any tool, implement, or material used or employed, or intended to be used or employed, in or about any of the operations aforesaid, or any forged security, document, or instrument whatsoever, or any machinery, frame, mould, plate, die, seal, paper, or other matter or thing used or employed, or intended to be used or employed, in the forgery of any security, document, or instrument whatsoever, such justice may, if he think fit, grant a warrant to search for the same; and if the same shall be found upon such search, it shall be lawful to seize and carry the same before some justice of the county or place, to be by him disposed of according to law; and all such matters and things so seized as aforesaid shall, by order of the court where any such offender shall be tried, or in case there shall be no such trial, then by order of some justice of the peace, be defaced and destroyed, or otherwise disposed of, as such court or justice shall direct.

47. Whosoever shall, after the commencement of this act, be convicted of any offence which shall have been subjected by any act or acts to the same pains and penalties as are imposed by the act passed in the 5 Eliz. [c. 14], intituled "An Act against Forgers of false Deeds and Writings," for any of the offences first enumerated in the said act, shall be guilty of felony, and shall, in lieu of such pains and penalties, be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years, and not less than three years; or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

48. Where by any act now in force any person falsely making, forging, counterfeiting, erasing, or altering any matter whatsoever, or uttering, publishing, offering, disposing of, putting away, or making use of any matter whatsoever, knowing the same to have been falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased, or altered, or any person demanding or endeavouring to receive or have anything, or to do or cause to be done any act, upon or by virtue of any matter whatsoever, knowing such matter to have been falsely made, forged, counterfeited, erased, or altered, would, according to the provisions contained in any such act, be guilty of felony, and would, before the passing of the act of the 1 Will. 4, c. 66, have been liable to suffer death as a felon; or where by any act now in force any person falsely personating another, or falsely acknowledging anything in the name of another, or falsely representing any other person than the real party to be such real party, or wilfully making a false entry in any book, account, or document, or in any manner wilfully falsifying any part of any book, account, or document, or wilfully making a transfer of any stock, annuity, or fund in the name of any person not being the owner thereof, or knowingly taking any false oath, or knowingly making any false affidavit or false affirmation, or demanding or receiving any money or other thing by virtue of any probate or letters of administration, knowing the will on which such probate shall have been obtained to have been false or forged, or knowing such probate or letters of administration to have been obtained by means of any false oath or false affirmation, would, according to the provisions contained in any such act, be guilty of felony, and would, before the passing of the said act of the 1 Will. 4, have been liable to suffer death as a felon; or where by any act now in force any person making or using, or knowingly having in his custody or possession, any frame, mould, or instrument for the making of paper, with certain words visible in the substance thereof, or any person making such paper, or causing certain words to appear visible in the substance of any paper, would, according to the provisions contained in any such act, be guilty of felony, and would, before the passing of the said act of the 1 Will. 4, have been liable to suffer death as a felon; then, and in each of the several cases aforesaid, if any person shall, after the commencement of this act, be convicted of any such felony as is hereinbefore in this section mentioned, or of aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring the commission thereof, and the same shall not be punishable under any of the other provisions of this act, every such person shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than three years; or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

49. In the case of every felony punishable under this act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this act shall on conviction be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement; and every person who shall aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of any misdemeanour punishable under this act shall be liable to be proceeded against, indicted, and punished as a principal offender.

50. All indictable offences mentioned in this act which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature and liable to the same punishments as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if they had been actually committed in that county or place; and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being an accessory to such an offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if the offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence shall be averred to have been committed on "the high seas:" provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of her Majesty's land or naval forces.

51. Whenever any person shall be convicted of a misdemeanour under this act it shall be lawful for the court, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this act authorised, to fine the offender, and to require him to enter into his own recognisances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and in all cases of felonies in this act mentioned it shall be lawful for the court, if it shall think fit, to require the offender to enter into his own recognisances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any of the punishments by this act authorised: provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause, for not finding sureties, for any period exceeding one year.

52. Whenever imprisonment, with or without hard labour, may be awarded for any offence under this act, the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction.

53. Whenever solitary confinement may be awarded for any offence under this act, the court may direct the offender to be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of his imprisonment, or of his imprisonment with hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year.

54. The court before which any indictable misdemeanour against this act shall be prosecuted or tried may allow the costs of the prosecution in the same manner as in cases of felony; and every order for the payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein paid and repaid, upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony.

55. Nothing in this act contained shall extend to Scotland, except as otherwise hereinbefore expressly provided.

56. This act shall commence and take effect on the 1st November, 1861.

27. If any person shall find or discover in any place whatever, or in the custody or possession of any person having the same without lawful authority or excuse, any false or counterfeit coin, resembling or apparently intended to resemble or pass for any of the Queen's current gold, silver, or copper coin, or any coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, or any instrument, tool, or engine whatsoever adapted and intended for the counterfeiting of any such coin, or any filings or clippings, or any gold or silver bullion, or any gold or silver in dust, solution, or otherwise, which shall have been produced or obtained by diminishing or lightening any of the Queen's current gold or silver coin, it shall be lawful for the person so finding or discovering, and he is hereby required to seize the same, and to carry the same forthwith before some justice of the peace; and where it shall be proved, on the oath of a credible witness before any justice of the peace, that there is reasonable cause to suspect that any person has been concerned in counterfeiting the Queen's current gold, silver, or copper coin, or any such foreign or other coin as in this act before mentioned, or has in his custody or possession any such false or counterfeit coin, or any instrument, tool, or engine whatsoever adapted and intended for the making or counterfeiting of any such coin, or any other machine used or intended to be used for making or counterfeiting any such coin, or any such filings, clippings, or bullion, or any such gold or silver in dust, solution, or otherwise as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, by warrant under his hand, to cause any place whatsoever belonging to or in the occupation or under the control of such suspected person to be searched, either in the day or in the night, and if any such false or counterfeit coin, or any such instrument, tool, or engine, or any such machine, or any such filings, clippings, or bullion, or any such gold or silver in dust, solution, or otherwise as aforesaid, shall be found in any place so searched, to cause the same to be seized and carried forthwith before some justice of the peace; and whosoever any such false or counterfeit coin, or any such instrument, tool, or engine, or any such machine, or any such filings, clippings, or bullion, or any such gold or silver in dust, solution, or otherwise as aforesaid, shall in any case whatsoever be seized and carried before a justice of the peace, he shall, if necessary, cause the same to be secured, for the purpose of being produced in evidence against any person who may be prosecuted for any offence against this act; and all such false and counterfeit coin, and all instruments, tools, and engines adapted and intended for the making or counterfeiting of coin, and all such machines, and all such filings, clippings, and bullion, and all such gold and silver in dust, solution, or otherwise as aforesaid, after they shall have been produced in evidence, or when they shall have been seized, and shall not be required to be produced in evidence, shall forthwith be delivered up to the officers of her Majesty's mint, or to the solicitors of her Majesty's treasury, or to any person authorised by them to receive the same.

28. Where any person shall tender, utter, or put off any false or counterfeit coin in one county or jurisdiction, and shall also tender, utter, or put off any other false or counterfeit coin in any other county or jurisdiction, either on the day of such first-mentioned tendering, uttering, or putting off, or within the space of ten days next ensuing, or where two or more persons, acting in concert in different counties or jurisdictions, shall commit any offence against this act, every such offender may be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished, and the offence laid and charged to have been committed, in any one of the said counties or jurisdictions, in the same manner in all respects as if the offence had been actually and wholly committed within such one county or jurisdiction.

29. Where, upon the trial of any person charged with any offence against this act, it shall be necessary to prove that any coin produced in evidence against such person is false or counterfeit, it shall not be necessary to prove the same to be false and counterfeit by the evidence of any moneyer, or other officer of her Majesty's mint, but it shall be sufficient to prove the same to be false or counterfeit by the evidence of any other credible witness.

30. Every offence of falsely making or counterfeiting any coin, or of buying, selling, receiving, paying, tendering, uttering, or putting off, or of offering to buy, sell, receive, pay, utter, or put off, any false or counterfeit coin, against the provisions of this act, shall be deemed to be complete, although the coin so made or counterfeited, or bought, sold, received, paid, tendered, uttered, or put off, or offered to be bought, sold, received, paid, uttered, or put off, shall not be in a fit state to be uttered, or the counterfeiting thereof shall not be finished or perfected.

31. It shall be lawful for any person whatsoever to apprehend any person who shall be found committing any indictable offence, or any high crime and offence, or crime and offence, against this act, and to convey or deliver him to some peace officer, constable, or officer of police, in order to his being conveyed as soon as reasonably may be before a justice of the peace or some other proper officer, to be dealt with according to law.

32. No conviction for any offence punishable on summary conviction under this act shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari into any of her Majesty's superior courts of record; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a valid conviction to sustain the same.

33. All actions and prosecutions to be commenced against any person for anything done in pursuance of this act shall, in England or Ireland, be laid and tried in the county where the fact was committed, and shall, in England, Ireland, or Scotland, be commenced within six months after the fact committed, and not otherwise; and notice in writing of such action, and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant or defender one month at least before the commencement of the action; and in any such action brought in England or Ireland the defendant may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence, at any trial to be had thereupon, and in Scotland the defender may insist on all relevant defences; and no plaintiff or pursuer shall recover in any such action if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made before such action brought, or if a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court after such action brought, by or on behalf of the defendant or defender; and if in England or Ireland a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or discontinue any such action after issue joined, or if, upon demurrer or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, or if, in Scotland, the verdict shall be for the defender, or if the pursuer shall abandon the action, or the court shall dismiss it as irrelevant or improperly laid, in every such case the defendant or defender shall recover his full costs as between attorney and client, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant or defender has by law in other cases; and though a verdict shall be given for the plaintiff or pursuer in any such action, such plaintiff or pursuer shall not have costs against the defendant or defender, unless the judge before whom the trial shall be shall certify his approbation of the action.

34. All high crimes and offences, and crimes and offences against this act which may be committed in Scotland, shall be proceeded against and tried according to the rules and procedure of the criminal law of Scotland; and all proceedings by this act made competent before any justice or justices, and all and every the powers and authorities by this act given to or conferred upon any such justice or justices, shall, in Scotland, be competent before, and may be exercised by, any sheriff, magistrate, or justice of the peace.

35. In the case of every felony punishable under the act, every principal in the second degree, and every accessory before the fact, shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any felony punishable under this act shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

36. All indictable offences mentioned in this act, which shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England or Ireland, shall be deemed to be offences of the same nature, and liable to the same punishments, as if they had been committed upon the land in England or Ireland, and may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in any county or place in England or Ireland in which the offender shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if the same had been actually committed in that county or place, and in any indictment for any such offence, or for being accessory to any such offence, the venue in the margin shall be the same as if such offence had been committed in such county or place, and the offence itself shall be averred to have been committed "on the high seas;" and where any of the crimes and offences, or high crimes and offences, mentioned in this act, shall be committed at sea, and the vessel in which the same shall be committed shall be registered in Scotland, or touch at any part thereof, the courts of criminal law of Scotland may inquire, try, and determine the same in the same manner as if such crime and offence, or high crime and offence, had been committed in Scotland: provided that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect any of the laws relating to the government of her Majesty's land or naval forces.

37. Where any person shall have been convicted of any offence against this act, or any former act relating to the coin, and shall afterwards be indicted for any offence against this act committed subsequent to such conviction, it shall be sufficient in any such indictment, after charging such subsequent offence, to state the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous offence; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous offence, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having or purporting to have the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, shall, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of the previous conviction, without proof of the signature or official character or authority of the person appearing to have signed the same, or of his custody or right to the custody of the records of the court; and for every such certificate a fee of 6s. 8d., and no more, shall be demanded or taken; and the proceedings upon any indictment for committing any offence after a previous conviction or convictions shall be as follows; that is to say, the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned upon so much only of the indictment as charges the subsequent offence; and if he plead not guilty, or if the court order a plea of not guilty to be entered on his behalf, the jury shall be charged, in the first instance, to inquire concerning such subsequent offence only; and if they find him guilty, or if on arraignment he plead guilty, he shall then, and not before, be asked whether he had been previously convicted, as alleged in the indictment; and if he answer that he had been so previously convicted, the court may proceed to sentence him accordingly; but if he deny that he had been so previously convicted, or stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to such question, the jury shall then be charged to inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions; and in such case it shall not be necessary to swear the jury again, but the oath already taken by them shall for all purposes be deemed to extend to such last-mentioned inquiry: provided that if, upon the trial of any person for any such subsequent offence, such person shall give evidence of his good character, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor, in answer thereto, to give evidence of the conviction of such person for the previous offence or offences before such verdict of guilty shall be returned, and the jury shall inquire concerning such previous conviction or convictions at the same time that they inquire concerning such subsequent offence.

38. Whenever any person shall be convicted of any indictable misdemeanour punishable under this act, the court may, if it shall think fit, in addition to or in lieu of any of the punishments by this act authorised, fine the offender, and require him to enter into his own recognisances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour; and in case of any felony punishable under this act, the court may, if it shall think fit, require the offender to enter into his own recognisances, and to find sureties, both or either, for keeping the peace, in addition to any punishment by this act authorised: provided that no person shall be imprisoned under this clause, for not finding sureties, for any period exceeding one year.

39. Whenever imprisonment, with or without hard labour, may be awarded for any indictable offence under this act, the court may sentence the offender to be imprisoned, or to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction.

40. Whenever solitary confinement may be awarded for any offence under this act, the court may direct the offender to be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of his imprisonment, or of his imprisonment with hard labour, not exceeding one month at any one time, and not exceeding three months in any one year.

41. Every offence hereby made punishable on summary conviction may be prosecuted in England in the manner directed by the act of the session holden in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and may be prosecuted in Ireland before two or more justices of the peace, or one metropolitan or stipendiary magistrate, in the manner directed by the act of the session holden in the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 93, or in such other manner as may be directed by any act that may be passed for like purposes; and all provisions contained in the said acts shall be applicable to such prosecutions in the same manner as if they were incorporated in this act: provided that nothing in this act contained shall in any manner alter or affect any enactment relating to procedure in the case of any offence punishable on summary conviction within the city of London or the metropolitan police district, or the recovery or application of any penalty or forfeiture for any such offence.

42. In all prosecutions for any offence against this act in England which shall be conducted under the direction of the solicitors of her Majesty's Treasury, the court before which such offence shall be prosecuted or tried shall allow the expenses of the prosecution in all respects as in cases of felony; and in all prosecutions for any such offence in England which shall not be so conducted, it shall be lawful for such court, in case a conviction shall take place, but not otherwise, to allow the expenses of the prosecution in like manner; and every order for the payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein paid and repaid, upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony.

43. This act shall commence and take effect on the 1st November, 1861.

Whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the statute law of England and Ireland relating to offences against the person: be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. Whosoever shall be convicted of murder shall suffer death as a felon.

2. Upon every conviction for murder the court shall pronounce sentence of death, and the same may be carried into execution, and all other proceedings upon such sentence and in respect thereof may be had and taken, in the same manner in all respects as sentences of death might have been pronounced and carried into execution, and all other proceedings thereupon and in respect thereof, might have been had and taken, before the passing of this act, upon a conviction for any other felony for which the prisoner might have been sentenced to suffer death as a felon.

3. The body of every person executed for murder shall be buried within the precincts of the prison in which he shall have been last confined after conviction, and the sentence of the court shall so direct.

4. All persons who shall conspire, confederate, and agree to murder any person, whether he be a subject of her Majesty or not, and whether he be within the Queen's dominions or not, and whosoever shall solicit, encourage, persuade, or endeavour to persuade, or shall propose to any person to murder any other person, whether he be a subject of her Majesty or not, and whether he be within the Queen's dominions or not, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not more than ten and not less than three years; or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

5. Whosoever shall be convicted of manslaughter shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than three years; or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, or to pay such fine as the court shall award, in addition to or without any such other discretionary punishment as aforesaid.

6. In any indictment for murder or manslaughter, or for being an accessory to any murder or manslaughter, it shall not be necessary to set forth the manner in which or the means by which the death of the deceased was caused, but it shall be sufficient in any indictment for murder to charge that the defendant did feloniously, wilfully, and of his malice aforethought kill and murder the deceased; and it shall be sufficient in any indictment for manslaughter to charge that the defendant did feloniously kill and slay the deceased; and it shall be sufficient in any indictment against any accessory to any murder or manslaughter to charge the principal with the murder or manslaughter (as the case may be) in the manner hereinbefore specified, and then to charge the defendant as an accessory in the manner heretofore used and accustomed.

7. No punishment or forfeiture shall be incurred by any person who shall kill another by misfortune, or in his own defence, or in any other manner without felony.

8. Every offence which before the commencement of the act 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, would have amounted to petit treason, shall be deemed to be murder only, and no greater offence; and all persons guilty in respect thereof, whether as principals or as accessories, shall be dealt with, indicted, tried, and punished as principals and accessories in murder.

9. Where any murder or manslaughter shall be committed on land out of the United Kingdom, whether within the Queen's dominions or without, and whether the person killed were a subject of her Majesty or not, every offence committed by any subject of her Majesty in respect of any such case, whether the same shall amount to the offence of murder or of manslaughter, or of being accessory to murder or manslaughter, may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished in any county or place in England or Ireland in which such person shall be apprehended or be in custody, in the same manner in all respects as if such offence had been actually committed in that county or place: provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent any person from being tried in any place out of England or Ireland for any murder or manslaughter committed out of England or Ireland, in the same manner as such person might have been tried before the passing of this act.

10. 74. Where any person shall be convicted on any indictment of any assault, whether with or without battery and wounding, or either of them, such person may, if the court think fit, in addition to any sentence which the court may deem proper for the offence, be adjudged to pay to the prosecutor his actual and necessary costs and expenses of the prosecution, and such moderate allowance for the loss of time as the court shall by affidavit, or other inquiry and examination, ascertain to be reasonable; and, unless the sum so awarded shall be sooner paid, the offender shall be imprisoned for any term the court shall award, not exceeding three months, in addition to the term of imprisonment, if any, to which the offender may be sentenced for the offence.

75. The court may, by warrant under hand and seal, order such sum as shall be so awarded to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender, and paid to the prosecutor, and that the surplus, if any, arising from such sale, shall be paid to the owner; and in case such sum shall be so levied, the imprisonment awarded until payment of such sum shall thereupon cease.

77. The court before which any misdemeanour indictable under the provisions of this act shall be prosecuted or tried may allow the costs of the prosecution in the same manner as in cases of felony; and every order for the payment of such costs shall be made out, and the sum of money mentioned therein paid and repaid, upon the same terms and in the same manner in all respects as in cases of felony.

78. Nothing in this act contained shall extend to Scotland, except as hereinbefore otherwise expressly provided.

79. This act shall commence and take effect on the 1st November, 1861.

2. Reserving rights of present incumbents, and other rights.
3. Rectors to have same powers of sale as are possessed by ecclesiastical corporations.

Whereas there are in England certain ecclesiastical benefices to which belong manors, lands, tenements, and hereditaments which, by custom or otherwise, the rectors, vicars, perpetual curates, or incumbents thereof have power to grant and lease out for lives and long terms of years, and such grants have been made by them at nominal annual rents, to the prejudice of their successors, and it is expedient to determine and put an end to the power to make such grants: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. It shall not be lawful for any prebendary of any prebend, not being a prebend of any cathedral or collegiate church, rector, vicar, perpetual curate, or incumbent, who, after the passing of this act, may become possessed of or entitled to any manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments belonging to any ecclesiastical benefice in England, to make any grant by copy of court roll or lease of any such manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments in consideration of any fine, premium, or foregift, but the same may, by any rector, vicar, perpetual curate, or incumbent appointed after the passing of this act, be leased, sold, exchanged, or enfranchised, or disposed of under the provisions of a certain act passed in the session of Parliament held in the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27, intituled "An Act for better enabling Incumbents of Ecclesiastical Benefices to demise the Lands belonging to their Benefices on Farming Leases;" of a certain other act passed in the same session of Parliament, chapter 108, intituled "An Act for enabling Ecclesiastical Corporations, aggregate and sole, to grant Leases for long Terms of Years;" and of a certain other act passed in the session of Parliament held in the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57, intituled "An Act to amend the Act of the fifth and sixth Years of her present Majesty, for enabling Ecclesiastical Corporations, aggregate and sole, to grant Leases for long Terms of Years," or such of the provisions of such acts respectively as are now in force.

2. Nothing herein contained shall interfere with or prevent the right and power of any such present prebendary, rector, vicar, perpetual curate, or incumbent, during his incumbency, to make any grant by copy of court roll or lease which he might lawfully have made before the passing of this act, and nothing herein contained shall prejudice or affect any grant heretofore made by any such prebendary, rector, vicar, perpetual curate, or incumbent, or any right of renewal or tenant right, if any such there be, in any manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments held under any such grant, or under any lease, nor shall this act prejudice or affect any power of sale, exchange, or enfranchisement existing under any statute now in force, or any present or future right of admission of any person to any copyhold tenement according to the custom of the manor of which it is holden, and to which such person may be legally entitled.

3. Notwithstanding anything contained in the 11th section of an act passed in the session held in the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, any rector, vicar, perpetual curate, or incumbent shall have such and the same powers of sale, exchange, and enfranchisement as are possessed by any ecclesiastical corporation, sole or aggregate, under any act now in force; and the provisions of an act passed in the session held in the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, shall, so far as the same relate to powers for the raising or application of money by trustees, allowances to lessees, arbitration, valuation, rate of interest, apportionment of rent, and substitution of titles on exchange, be applied, mutatis mutandis, to sales, exchanges, or enfranchisements of any manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments in this act comprised; but the proceeds of any such sales or enfranchisements, and any monies received by way of equality of exchange, shall be applied according to the provisions in that behalf contained in the said act passed in the session held in the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, and in the said act passed in the session held in the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57.

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Old Metal Dealers Act, 1861."

2. This act shall come into operation on the 1st January, 1862.

3. In the construction and for the purposes of this act, the term, "dealer in old metals" shall mean any person dealing in, buying, and selling old metal, scrap metal, broken metal, or partly manufactured metal goods, or defaced or old metal goods, and whether such person deals in such articles only, or together with second-hand goods or marine stores; and the term "old metals" shall mean the said articles.

4. It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, upon complaint made before him, upon oath, that the complainant has reason to believe, and does believe, that any old metal stolen, or unlawfully obtained, is kept in any house, shop, room, or place, by any dealer in old metals within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justice, to give authority, by special warrant, to any constable or police officer to enter, in the daytime, such house, shop, room, or other place, with such assistance as may be necessary, and to search for and seize all such old metals there found, and to carry all the articles so seized before the justice issuing the said warrant, or some other justice exercising similar jurisdiction; and such justice shall thereupon issue a summons requiring such dealer to appear before two justices, at a time and place to be named in such summons, and if such dealer shall not then and there prove to the satisfaction of such justices how he came by the said articles, or if any such dealer shall be found in possession of any old metal which has been stolen or unlawfully obtained, and on his being taken or summoned before two justices it shall be proved to the satisfaction of such justices that at the time when he received it he had reasonable cause to believe it to have been stolen or unlawfully obtained, then in either of such cases such dealer shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, and, for any subsequent offence, to a penalty not exceeding 20*l.*, or, at the discretion of the justices, in the case of such second or subsequent offence, shall be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for any period not exceeding three calendar months: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall interfere with or affect any proceeding by indictment to which such dealer in old metals may be liable for feloniously and knowingly receiving stolen goods, but no person shall be prosecuted by indictment and proceeded against under this act for the same offence.

5. When any dealer in old metals is convicted of either of the offences aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such justices, or, on proof of such conviction, for any other two justices of the same petty sessional district of a county, or city, or borough, on proof of such conviction, to order and direct that such dealer shall be registered at the principal police office of such district, or city, or borough, in a book to be kept by the chief officer of police for the purpose, according to the form No. 1 in the schedule to this act annexed, and from and after such registration such dealer shall be subject to and shall conform to the several regulations hereinafter provided, for such period, not exceeding three years, as such justices shall order; and if such dealer shall, during such period, be convicted of any offence under this act, the justices so convicting him may order such period to be extended for not more than three years from the time when such period would otherwise expire; and in like manner, whilst such dealer is subject to the regulations of this act, on any further conviction under this act, and as often as such further conviction shall take place, the justices so convicting him may order the period for which he is then subject to such regulations to be extended for not more than three years from the time when such period would otherwise expire: provided always, that where any dealer in old metals, who is also a dealer in marine stores within the meaning of the 480th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, is registered as aforesaid, he shall likewise conform to the regulations contained in the said section of the said act, and shall be liable to the penalties in the said section provided for not conforming to such regulations.

7. It shall be lawful for two justices by order in writing to authorise one or more inspectors or sergeants of police to visit at any time the places of business and inspect the goods and books of dealers in old metals who are subject to the regulations of this act as aforesaid, and who carry on business within the district of a county or the city or borough for which such justices act, and every such inspector or sergeant shall and is hereby empowered to record in the book hereinafter required to be kept by every such dealer in old metals the day and hour of his visit, and place opposite the entry of every article examined by him his initials or name in attestation of the same.

(4). He shall without delay give notice to the officer on duty at the police station nearest to the place where he carries on business of any articles then in his possession, or which shall thereafter come into his possession, answering the description of any articles which have been stolen, embezzled, or fraudulently obtained, of which printed or written information, containing a description of such articles, is given to him by any officer of police:

(5). He shall keep all old metals purchased or received by him without changing the form in which such articles were when so purchased, or disposing of the same in any way for a period of forty-eight hours after such article has been purchased or received:

For any act or default contrary to the foregoing regulations done or made by any registered dealer in old metals, during the period which the justices shall order as above provided, he shall incur a penalty of not less than 20s., and not exceeding 5l., and for every subsequent offence a penalty of not less than 5l., and not exceeding 20l.

9. Every penalty hereby incurred, and all costs directed to

10. The justices imposing any penalty under this act may, if they shall think fit, direct the whole or any part thereof to be applied in compensating any person for any wrong or damage which he may have sustained by the act or default in respect of which such penalty is imposed, or to be applied in and towards payment of the expenses of the proceedings; and subject to such directions or specific application as aforesaid, all penalties shall be paid to the treasurer of the county or of the city or borough within which such penalties are recovered, and shall be carried to and from part of the county fund, or of the city or borough fund of such county, or of such city or borough respectively.

The court for the election of knights of the shire for the said northern division shall be held at Leeds, and the court for the election of knights of the shire of the said southern division shall be held at Wakefield; but the justices of the peace for the said West Riding, assembled at any court of quarter sessions not later than the first to be holden after the dissolution of the present Parliament, shall name the polling places for each of the said northern and southern divisions, and divide such divisions into convenient districts for polling, and shall assign one of such districts to every polling place named; and a list, stating the polling places, and describing the districts assigned, shall be lodged with the clerk of the peace of the West Riding, who shall forthwith cause copies of such list to be printed, and shall deliver a copy of such list to every person who shall apply for the same, upon payment of 1s. for each copy: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall, as regards the divisions constituted by this act, affect the power of altering from time to time polling places and districts contained in the act of the session held in the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 103.

4. In case of a dissolution of the present Parliament, and a new election taking place, before the justices have named such polling places and assigned such polling districts as aforesaid, the places then by law appointed for taking the poll for elections of knights of the shire for the West Riding of York, which are situate in the respective divisions constituted by this act, shall be the places for taking the poll at such election for the election of knights of the shire to serve in Parliament for the respective divisions constituted as aforesaid, and the districts assigned to such polling places shall be deemed to continue for the purposes of such election, subject to this qualification: that if a portion of any district assigned to any polling place is situate in a different division from the polling place, the sheriff shall, in his proclamation of the place and time at which the election of members for either division is to be held, declare at what polling place or polling places the voters of any parish or township situate in such outlying portion are to vote.

5. For the purposes of the first general election for the said northern and southern divisions that takes place after the dissolution of this present Parliament, the clerk of the peace of the said West Riding shall make a new register of voters, by apportioning to each division, according to the situation in such division of the parishes or townships, the several persons appearing, by the existing register, to be for the time being voters for the said West Riding; and the voters for the said northern and southern divisions respectively shall be determined by such new register, and shall be entitled to vote accordingly; and the clerk of the peace of the said West Riding shall send notice to the overseers of each parish and township within the said West Riding, of the division for which the voters of such parish or township are entitled to vote, and the said overseers shall publish such notice in manner directed by law; and at such general election as is mentioned in this section, all persons shall vote in the polling district in which their qualifications are situate, unless they may have claimed, and be entitled by law, to vote in some other polling district within the same division.

6. For the purposes of all elections subsequent to the first general election held for the said divisions after the dissolution of this present Parliament, registers of voters shall be formed in respect of the divisions of the said West Riding constituted under this act, at the same time and in like manner as if they were divisions of counties now returning members to serve in Parliament; but nothing in this act shall affect the rights of persons whose names are for the time being on the register of voters to vote at any election of a member of the West Riding in respect of any vacancy that may take place before such dissolution.

7. After the passing of this act, the southern division of Lancashire shall be entitled to return three knights of the shire, instead of two, to serve in Parliament.

8. As soon as may be after the passing of this act, the Speaker of the House of Commons shall, without any motion being made, or, if it be during the recess, without receiving any such notice as is required in the case of an ordinary vacancy, issue a warrant to the Clerk of the Crown to make out a writ for electing an additional member of the House of Commons for the said southern division of Lancashire, and such warrant shall be valid notwithstanding the issue thereof during the recess of the House of Commons by prorogation or adjournment, and the same proceedings, as nearly as circumstances admit, shall be had in pursuance of the writ so made out as if the said division had previously returned three members, instead of two, to serve in Parliament, and a vacancy had occurred in the seat of one of the members returned for such division.

9. Birkenhead, in the county of Cheshire, shall, for the purposes of this act, be a borough, and shall from and after the 1st day of December, 1861, return one member to serve in Parliament; it shall, as such borough, include the places following; that is to say, the extra-parochial chapelry of Birkenhead, the several townships of Cloughton, Tranmere, and Oxtou, and so much of the township of Higher Bebington as lies to the eastward of the road leading from Higher Tranmere to Lower Bebington.

10. The sheriff for the time being of the county in which the borough constituted by this act is situate shall, as soon as possible after the passing of this act, and in every subsequent year in the month of March, by writing under his hand, to be delivered to the clerk of the peace of the county within one week, and to be by such clerk of the peace filed and preserved with the records of his office, appoint for such borough a fit person, being resident therein, to be, and such person so appointed shall accordingly be, the returning officer for such borough until the appointment to be made in the succeeding March; and the provisions contained in sect. 11 of the act of the session of the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, providing for the event of the death or incapacity of any person appointed as returning officer for any borough, as therein mentioned, and exempting any person so appointed from serving again in the same office, and disqualifying certain persons from being so appointed, and persons so appointed from being appointed churchwardens or overseers, shall extend and be applicable to and for the appointment of returning officer for the borough constituted by this act, and to the returning officer to be appointed for the same.

11. Notwithstanding the continuance of this present Parliament, a register of voters shall be formed, in and after the year 1861, for the borough constituted by this act, in like manner as if it were a borough now returning a member to serve in Parliament, with this qualification, that, for the purposes of the register of the said borough to be formed in the year 1861, the act passed in the 6 Vict. c. 18, shall be construed as if the month of August had been inserted therein in place of the month of June, and the month of September in the place of the month of July, and the month of October in the place of the month of August, and the month of November in the place of the month of September; and it shall be the duty of the revising barrister to hold his court for the revision of the list of the voters for the borough between the 14th day of November and the 21st day of November, 1861, instead of between the 15th day of September and the last day of October, as in the said act mentioned; and the printed book or books constituting the register of voters for the borough of Birkenhead shall be delivered to the returning officer of the said borough on or before the last day of November, as in the said act mentioned; and the said register shall be deemed to be in force from and after such last-mentioned day.

12. No person shall be registered in the register of voters formed after the passing of this act, for the county of Cheshire, who would not be entitled to be so registered in case the borough of Birkenhead were now a borough returning a member to serve in Parliament.

13. In case a dissolution of this present Parliament takes place before the day at and from which the register of voters to be first made for the borough constituted by this act begins to be in force, the writs for the election of a member to serve in Parliament for such borough shall not be issued until such register begins to be in force; but if no dissolution of this present Parliament takes place before such last-mentioned day, the Speaker of the House of Commons shall, without any motion being made, or, if it be during the recess, without receiving any such notice as is required in the case of an ordinary vacancy, issue a warrant to the Clerk of the Crown to make out a writ for the election of one member for the said borough; and such warrant shall be valid, notwithstanding the issue thereof during the recess of the House of Commons by prorogation or adjournment; and the same proceedings, as nearly as circumstances admit, shall be had in pursuance of the writ so made out as if the said borough had previously returned a member to Parliament, and a vacancy had occurred in the seat of such member.

14. All warrants and writs to be issued for the election of members to serve in Parliament in pursuance of this act, and all mandates, precepts, instruments, proceedings, and notices consequent upon such writs, shall be framed in such manner and form as may be necessary for the carrying the provisions of this act into effect.

15. Subject to the provisions of this act, all laws, statutes, usages, provisions, and penalties now in force relating to the issuing of writs, the conduct of elections, or otherwise respecting the representation of the people in England and Wales, shall remain in full force, and shall apply, as nearly as circumstances admit, to the borough hereby constituted, as if it were now a borough returning a member to Parliament, and to the divisions of counties hereby authorised to return additional members, as if they were now returning such additional member.

Certified Industrial Schools.

4. Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Home Department, hereinafter referred to as the Secretary of State, may, upon the application of the managers of any school in which industrial training is provided, and in which children are clothed, lodged, and fed, as well as taught, appoint such person as he may think fit to examine into the condition of the school, and to report to him thereon ; and, if satisfied with such report, he may, by writing under his hand, certify that such school is fitted for the reception of such children as may be sent there in pursuance of this act, and shall cause a copy of the certificate to be sent to the clerk of the peace of the county in which the school is situate, and to the town clerk of every borough within such county ; but no school shall be certified under this act and also under the act of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 86, intituled "An Act for the better Care and Reformation of Youthful Offenders in Great Britain."

5. Every industrial school that has been certified under this act, hereinafter referred to as "a certified industrial school," shall from time to time, and at least once in each year, be inspected by a person to be appointed by the Secretary of State ; and it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State, if dissatisfied with the condition of such school as reported to him, by notice under his hand, addressed to the managers of such school, to declare that the certificate is withdrawn, from and after a day to be specified in such notice, not less than two months after the date thereof.

6. Any such notice as aforesaid may be served on the managers of such school, by delivering the same personally to any one of them, or by sending it, by post or otherwise, in a letter addressed to them or any of them at the said school, or at the usual or last known place of abode of any manager, or of the authorised secretary, and shall cause a copy of the notice to be sent to the clerk of the peace of the county in which the school is situate, and to the town clerk of every borough within such county ; and any school, on the managers of which such notice has been served, shall, from and after the day therein specified, cease to be a certified industrial school within the meaning of this act.

7. The managers of any certified industrial school may, upon giving six months' previous notice of their intention so to do in writing, under the hand of one or more of them, or of the authorised secretary, require the Secretary of State to withdraw the certificate given to such school ; and accordingly, at the expiration of six months from the date of the notice, such certificate shall be deemed to be withdrawn, and from thenceforth it shall not be lawful to send or receive there any more children under this act ; but the managers of a certified industrial school shall not, except in manner provided by this section, have power, without the consent of the Secretary of State, expressed in writing, to withdraw from the obligation of educating, clothing, lodging, and feeding any children that, at the time of the giving such notice, may be in the school, in pursuance of the provisions of this act, until the certificate be withdrawn, or until such children be removed to some other industrial school by an order of the Secretary of State ; and if such managers make default in so doing, they shall incur a penalty not exceeding 5*l.* for each default, to be recovered in manner hereinafter mentioned.

8. The guardians of any union, or any parish wherein the relief to the poor is administered by a board of guardians, may, if they deem proper, with consent of the Poor-law Board, contract with the managers of any certified industrial school for the maintenance and education of any pauper child.

Admission of Children to and their Status at School.

9. Children of the descriptions hereinafter mentioned may be sent to certified industrial schools, in pursuance of the provisions of this act ; that is to say—

- (1). Any child apparently under the age of fourteen years found begging or receiving alms, or being in any street or public place for the purpose of begging or receiving alms :
- (2). Any child apparently under the age of fourteen years that is found wandering, and not having any home or settled place of abode, or any visible means of subsistence, or frequents the company of reputed thieves :

- (3). Any child apparently under the age of twelve years who, having committed an offence punishable by imprisonment, or some less punishment, ought nevertheless, in the opinion of the justices, regard being had to his age, and to the circumstances of the case, to be sent to an industrial school :
- (4). Any child under the age of fourteen years whose parent represents that he is unable to control him, and that he desires such child to be sent to an industrial school, in pursuance of this act, and who at the same time gives such undertaking or other security as may be approved by the justices before whom he is brought, in pursuance of this act, to pay all expenses incurred for the maintenance of such child at school :

Provided that no child who, on being brought before the justices, is proved to have been previously convicted of felony, shall be deemed to be within the provisions of this act.

10. Any person may bring before justices any child that is hereinbefore declared to be liable to be sent to an industrial school ; and the justices shall make full inquiry into all the facts of the case, and if satisfied, on the result of such inquiry, that this act applies to such child, and that it is expedient to deal with him under its provisions, may, by writing under their hands and seals, order the child to be sent, for such period as they may think necessary for his education and training, to any certified industrial school, whether situate within their jurisdiction or not, the managers of which are willing to receive such child ; subject to this qualification, that it shall be the duty of the justices to select, if possible, an industrial school conducted in accordance with the religious persuasion to which the parent of the child appears to them to belong : provided also, that the justices shall have power, while inquiry is being made respecting such child, or respecting a school to which he may be sent, to order him to be taken to the workhouse belonging to the parish in which such child has been found, and to be detained therein, at the cost of the union to which the parish belongs, for any time not exceeding seven days, or until an order be made, previous to the expiration thereof, for the discharge of such child, or for his being sent to an industrial school, as hereinbefore provided, and such child shall be so detained accordingly : provided that the order of the justices sending the child to school shall specify the religious persuasion to which the child appears to the justices to belong ; and it shall be lawful for a minister of that religious persuasion to visit the child at the school on such days and at such times of the day as may from time to time be fixed by regulations to be made by the Secretary of State, for the purpose of instructing him in religion.

11. The managers of any certified industrial school may, at their discretion, permit any child sent there in pursuance of this act to sleep or lodge at the dwelling of his parent, or of any trustworthy and respectable person, so that they educate, feed, and clothe the child in all respects as if he were lodging in the school itself, and that they report to the Secretary of State, in such manner as he may require, every instance in which they exercise a discretion under this section.

12. The time during which any child is lodged in any certified industrial school under this act shall, for all the purposes of the act of the session of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 86, and of every act incorporated therewith, be excluded in the computation of the time therein mentioned.

13. It shall be lawful for the managers of any certified industrial school to make all necessary rules, orders, and by-laws for the regulation and management of the school under their charge not repugnant to the provisions of this act ; but no such rules, orders, or by-laws shall be enforced until they have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of State.

14. No child shall, in pursuance of this act, be detained against his consent in any certified industrial school after he has attained the age of fifteen years.

15. The Secretary of State may, from time to time, by writing under his hand, remove any child sent to an industrial school, in pursuance of this act, from one certified industrial school to another, so that the whole period of the detention of such child at industrial schools be not thereby increased: he may also, in like manner, discharge any child from an industrial school, either absolutely, or upon condition of the parent of such child or any near relation undertaking to educate, clothe, and feed him, or entering into such other undertaking as the Secretary of State may require.

16. On the application of the parent, or of the managers, or of the guardians who may be liable to make any repayment as aforesaid on account of any child, any justices of the county in which the school is situate, if satisfied that a suitable employment has been provided for the child, or that there is otherwise sufficient cause, may discharge the child from the school before the full expiration of the period for which he has been sent there.

Maintenance of Children at School.

17. The Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, upon the representation of the Secretary of State, may, out of monies provided by Parliament, contribute towards the maintenance of any children sent to school in pursuance of this act, except such children as are sent to school, in pursuance of this act, at the desire of their parents, and on their representation that they are unable to control them, at such rate per head as may be determined by him, or such portion of the cost as may not be recovered from the parent of the child in manner herein provided, or such other portion as the Secretary of State may recommend.

18. The justices by whom any child is sent to school in pursuance of this act, or justices having jurisdiction within the district where the school is situate to which any child is sent in pursuance of this act, or in which the parent of such child shall reside, upon an application made by any person appointed by the Secretary of State for that purpose, or by any agent of such person, shall have authority to make an order on the parent of such child for the payment, either at the time of the child being first sent to school, or at any time during his continuance at school, of the expenses of his maintenance at school to an amount not exceeding 5s. for every week during which the child remains at such school.

19. The order made by the justices may specify the time during which the parent is to pay the sums thereby directed to be paid, or it may be indefinite, and until further order; and any justices of the peace having jurisdiction to make such order may from time to time vary the same whenever circumstances require it, on the application either of the parent or of any person appointed by the Secretary of State to receive the money, or by the agent of such person, on fourteen days' notice being first given of such application to such person or his agent, or to such parent, respectively.

20. If any child, whether lodging in the school or elsewhere, before attaining the age of fifteen years, or before being duly discharged, wilfully absconds from the school to which he is sent in pursuance of this act, or neglects to attend thereat, or wilfully refuses to conform to the regulations thereof, any justices having jurisdiction in the place in which the school is situate or in which the child is retaken may, by writing under their hands and seals, order him to be sent back to the school, and to be detained there until he attains the age of fifteen years, or for such shorter period as the justices think fit, or, instead of sending him back to such last-mentioned school, the justices may commit him, under the provisions of the act of the session of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 86, to any reformatory school certified under the said act.

21. Any person who directly or indirectly withdraws a child from the certified industrial school to which he has been sent, previously to his attaining the age of fifteen years, or to being duly discharged, or who induces or aids him to abscond, or who knowingly conceals or harbours him, or in any way prevents his return, shall for every such offence incur a penalty not exceeding 6l., or shall be liable, at the discretion of the justices, to be imprisoned for any period not exceeding twenty days.

Recovery of Penalties.

22. Penalties may be recovered and payments may be enforced under this act in manner provided by the act of the session of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, and any act amending the same.

Evidence.

23. Whenever the Secretary of State grants a certificate to, or withdraws it from, any industrial school, in pursuance of this act, he shall cause a notice of such grant or withdrawal to be published in the London Gazette within one calendar month, and such publication shall be sufficient evidence of the fact in all proceedings before justices and other courts.

24. The order made by the justices sending any child to a certified industrial school shall be forwarded to the managers thereof, and shall be a sufficient warrant for the detention of the child.

25. Whenever it is necessary to prove that any industrial school is duly certified under this act, the production of an attested copy of the certificate, or of the notice published in the London Gazette, shall be sufficient evidence thereof; and the production of the order under which any child has been sent to, or is detained in, any certified industrial school under this act, or a copy of such order, with a memorandum signed by one of the managers or their authorised secretary, or by the superintendent or master or matron of any such school, that the child named in such order was duly received into, and is at the signing thereof detained in, such school, or has been otherwise disposed of according to law, and the production of any order made under this act, or a copy thereof, certified by the clerk to the justices making the same to be a correct copy, shall in all proceedings whatsoever be sufficient evidence of the due making and signing of all or any of such orders, memorandum, and certificate respectively, and of the sending, detention, and identity of the child or parent named in such orders respectively, without proof of the signatures of the justices or other persons appearing to have signed the same respectively.

Forms.

26. No summons, notice, or order made for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this act shall be invalidated for want of form only; and the form in the schedule to this act annexed, or any form to the like effect, may be used in the case to which it refers, and when used, shall be deemed sufficient.

Repeal of Acts.

27. There shall be repealed the acts hereinafter mentioned; that is to say—

- (1). An act passed in the session holden in the 20 & 21 Vict. c. 48, intituled "An Act to make better Provision for the Care and Education of vagrant, destitute, and disorderly Children, and for the Extension of Industrial Schools:"
- (2). An act passed in the session holden in the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 108, intituled "An Act to amend the Industrial Schools Act, 1857:"

Provided that such repeal shall not affect—

- (1). Any certificate given or anything duly done under any act hereby repealed:
- (2). Any order made under any act hereby repealed:
- (3). Any penalty, forfeiture, or other punishment incurred under any act hereby repealed, or any remedy for recovering or enforcing the same.

28. This act shall apply to all schools certified under the acts hereby repealed or either of them, and to all children sent to any industrial school under the acts hereby repealed or either of them, in the same manner in all respects as if such certificate had been given or children been sent under the provisions of this act, with this qualification, that no child shall be detained at any industrial school, in pursuance of any order made under the repealed acts, for a longer period than he would have been detained if this act had not passed.

3. Who this act shall not apply to.
4. When subjects of foreign states shall die in her Majesty's dominions, and there shall be no persons to administer to their estates, the consuls of such foreign states may administer.

Whereas, by reason of the present law of domicile, the wills of British subjects dying whilst resident abroad are often defeated, and their personal property administered in a manner contrary to their expectations and belief; and it is desirable to amend such law, but the same cannot be effectually done without the consent and concurrence of foreign states: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

- Sect. 1. Whenever her Majesty shall, by convention with any foreign state, agree that provisions to the effect of the enactments herein contained shall be applicable to the subjects of her Majesty and of such foreign state respectively, it shall be lawful for her Majesty, by any order in council, to direct, and it is hereby enacted, that from and after the publication of such order in the London Gazette, no British subject, resident at the time of his or her death in the foreign country named in such order, shall be deemed, under any circumstances, to have acquired a domicile in such country, unless such British subject shall have been resident in such country for one year immediately preceding his or her decease, and shall also have made and deposited in a public office of such foreign country (such office to be named in the order in council) a declaration, in writing, of his or her intention to become domiciled in such foreign country; and every British subject dying resident in such foreign country, but without having so resided and made such declaration as aforesaid, shall be deemed, for all purposes of testate or intestate succession as to moveables, to retain the domicile he or she possessed at the time of his or her going to reside in such foreign country as aforesaid.

2. After any such convention as aforesaid shall have been entered into by her Majesty with any foreign state, it shall be lawful for her Majesty, by order in council, to direct, and from and after the publication of such order in the London Gazette it shall be and is hereby enacted, that no subject of any such foreign country who, at the time of his or her death, shall be resident in any part of Great Britain or Ireland, shall be deemed, under any circumstances, to have acquired a domicile therein, unless such foreign subject shall have been resident within Great Britain or Ireland for one year immediately preceding his or her decease, and shall also have signed, and deposited with her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Home Department, a declaration in writing of his or her desire to become and be domiciled in England, Scotland, or Ireland, and that the law of the place of such domicile shall regulate his or her moveable succession.

3. This act shall not apply to any foreigners who may have obtained letters of naturalisation in any part of her Majesty's dominions.

4. Whenever a convention shall be made between her Majesty and any foreign state, whereby her Majesty's consuls or vice-consuls in such foreign state shall receive the same or the like powers and authorities as are hereinafter expressed, it shall be lawful for her Majesty, by order in council, to direct, and from and after the publication of such order in the London Gazette it shall be and is hereby enacted, that whenever any subject of such foreign state shall die within the dominions of her Majesty, and there shall be no person present at the time of such death who shall be rightfully entitled to administer to the estate of such deceased person, it shall be lawful for the consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of such foreign state, within that part of her Majesty's dominions where such foreign subject shall die, to take possession and have the custody of the personal property of the deceased, and to apply the same in payment of his or her debts and funeral expenses, and to retain the surplus for the benefit of the persons entitled thereto; but such consul, vice-consul, or consular agent shall immediately apply for and shall be entitled to obtain from the proper court letters of administration of the effects of such deceased person, limited in such manner and for such time as to such court shall seem fit.

Whereas it is expedient to amend the law relating to the drainage of land for agricultural purposes: be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Preliminary.

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Land Drainage Act, 1861."

2. This act, in so far as the same relates to commissions of sewers, shall include any commission of sewers granted by her Majesty, and for the time being in force, whether such commission is or is not granted in pursuance of this act, or has or has not been granted previously to this act, and in so far as the same relates to commissioners of sewers, shall include commissioners acting under any such commission as aforesaid; but it shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland, or to any part of the metropolis, as defined by the act passed in the session holden in the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, intitled "An Act for the better Local Management of the Metropolis."

3. "Watercourse" shall include all rivers, streams, drains, sewers, and passages through which water flows:

"Person" shall include any body of persons, corporate or unincorporate, unless there is something in the context inconsistent therewith:

"Owner," as used throughout this act, except where it is otherwise defined in the provisions relating to rating, shall have the same meaning as it has in the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845.

PART I.

COMMISSIONS OF SEWERS.

Assignment of new Limits.

4. It shall be lawful for her Majesty, upon the recommendation of the inclosure commissioners, to be obtained on such application and subject to such conditions as are hereinafter mentioned, to direct commissions of sewers into all parts of England, inland as well as maritime, and to assign as the limits for the jurisdiction of such commissions any areas that may be thought most expedient, having regard to the levels, and other facilities for drainage, within such areas, with power for her Majesty to include within the limits of any commission of sewers any area to which a commission of sewers may not hitherto have been assigned, or any area either wholly or partially within the limits of an existing commission of sewers; subject to this proviso, that no alteration shall be made affecting the jurisdiction of any commissioners of sewers, without the consent of a special meeting of such commissioners.

5. The following proceedings shall be taken for the purpose of obtaining the recommendation of the inclosure commissioners to the grant of a commission of sewers:—

- (1). A petition shall be presented to the inclosure commissioners, stating the proposed boundaries of the area to be comprised within the limits of the commission, by reference to a map, or in such other manner as the commissioners think expedient, and signed by the proprietors of one-tenth part of the land within such boundaries :

- (3). The petition shall be supported by such evidence as the inclosure commissioners require, but the matter thereof shall not be entertained until the petitioners have given such security as the inclosure commissioners may require for the payment of costs, in the event of the petition being unsuccessful :
- (3). Upon the receipt of such petition the inclosure commissioners may, if they think fit, send an inspector to the place, for the purpose of making inquiries as to the genuineness of the petition, and as to the propriety of the proposed boundaries, and as to the number of proprietors assenting to or dissenting from the prayer of the petition :
- (4). Before commencing such inquiry the inspector shall give such notice as the inclosure commissioners direct of his intention to make the same, and of a time and place at which he will be prepared to hear all proprietors desirous of being heard before him on the subject of such inquiry, and of a further time, being not less than fourteen days, within which all proprietors intending to dissent from the prayer of the petition, must express such dissent :
- (5). The inclosure commissioners shall dismiss the petition if the proprietors of one-third part of the land within the proposed boundaries express their dissent from the prayer thereof, in writing addressed to the inclosure commissioners, and sent to their office in London within such time as aforesaid ; but if no such dissent be expressed, and if the commissioners, after hearing the report of their inspector, approve of the proposed boundaries, either with or without modification, one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State shall convey an intimation of such approval to her Majesty ; and a commission of sewers for the area as proposed by the petitioners, or as modified by the inclosure commissioners, shall thereupon be issued.

6. The following persons shall be deemed to be proprietors for the purposes of this act ; that is to say—

- (1). Any person entitled for his own benefit, at law or in equity, for an estate in fee, to the possession or receipt of the rents and profits of any freehold or copyhold land, whether such land is or not subject to incumbrances :
- (2). Any person absolutely entitled in possession, at law or in equity, for his own benefit, to a beneficial lease of land of which not less than twenty-five years are unexpired, whether such land is or not subject to incumbrances ; but no lease shall be deemed to be a beneficial lease, within the meaning of this act, if the rent reserved thereon exceeds one-third part of the full annual value of the land demised by such lease :
- (3). Any person entitled under any existing or future settlement, at law or in equity, for his own benefit, and for the term of his own life, or the life of any other person, to the possession or receipt of the rents and profits of land of any tenure, whether subject or not to incumbrances, in which the estate for the time being, subject to the trusts of the settlement, is an estate for lives or years renewable for ever, or is an estate renewable for a term of not less than sixty years, or is an estate for a term of years, of which not less than sixty are unexpired, or is a greater estate than any of the foregoing estates :
- (4). The word " settlement," as herein used, shall include any act of Parliament, will, deed, or other assurance whereby particular estates or particular interests in land are created, with remainders or interests expectant thereon :
- (5). Any body corporate, any corporation sole, any trustees for charities, and any commissioners or trustees for ecclesiastical, collegiate, or other public purposes, entitled at law or in equity, in the case of freehold estates or copyhold estates in fee, and in the case of leasehold estates to a lease for an unexpired term of not less than sixty years.

7. Where any proprietor as hereinbefore defined is a minor, or of unsound mind, or a married woman, the guardian, committee, or husband, as the case may be, of such proprietor, shall be the proprietor within the meaning of this act ; subject to this proviso, that a married woman entitled for her separate use, and not restrained from anticipation, shall, for the purposes of this act, be treated as, if she were not married.

8. Where a corporation aggregate, a joint-stock or other company, or any body of proprietors or undertakers, is proprietor of any land, such corporation, company, body of proprietors or undertakers respectively, shall be deemed to be one proprietor for the purpose of giving an assent or dissent under this act, and may express their assent or dissent in writing under their common seal in the case of a corporation, and in any other case under the hands of three directors or other persons in the direction or management of the company or concern ; but no member of such corporation, nor proprietor or person interested in such company or concern, shall be entitled to dissent individually as a proprietor in respect of such land.

9. Where several persons are proprietors of land as joint tenants, coparceners, or tenants in common in undivided moieties, they shall in respect of such land be accounted as one proprietor, but the concurrence of the proprietors of two-third parts of such land shall be deemed to be the concurrence of the whole.

10. When any portion of land comprised within the boundaries referred to in any such petition as is hereinbefore mentioned, appears to have no proprietor within the meaning of this act, or the proprietor cannot be found, the land so circumstanced shall be altogether excluded in any computation that may be made of the proportion borne by the dissenting proprietors of any area of land as hereinbefore provided to the aggregate number of the proprietors of such land.

11. Any inspector sent by the inclosure commissioners in pursuance of this act may, by summons under his hand, require to appear before him any persons whomsoever, and examine them upon oath or otherwise touching any matter relating to the purposes of the inquiry, and he may by any such summons require any parochial officer, or any officer of, or acting under any corporation, guardians, or directors of the poor, and any commissioner, trustee, officer, or person acting under any local act of Parliament in force within the district to which any such inquiry may relate, to produce before him any surveys, plans, sections, rate books, or other like documents which may by reason of their office be in their custody or control, touching any matter relating to the purposes of such inquiry ; and such inspector may examine, inspect, or take copies of any such books, surveys, plans, sections, and documents, or any of them, or part thereof ; and whosoever wilfully disobeys any such summons, or prevents any such inspector from examining, inspecting, or taking copies as last aforesaid, or refuses to answer any question put to him by such inspector, for the purposes of the said inquiry, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, to be recovered in a summary manner ; but no person shall be required to attend in obedience to any summons unless the reasonable charges of his attendance have been paid or tendered to him.

12. All costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the petitioners or the inclosure commissioners in obtaining the issue of a commission of sewers in pursuance of this act shall be a charge on the rates leviable by the commissioners of sewers acting under such commission, but if no commission is issued, all such costs, charges, and expenses as aforesaid shall be defrayed by the petitioners.

13. The issue of a commission of sewers for any area shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this act in respect of the issue of such commission have been complied with.

Duration of Commission.

14. A commission of sewers once issued shall be deemed to continue until such time as it may be superseded by her Majesty ; and her Majesty may from time to time, by writing under her sign-manual, fill up any vacancies that may arise in the body of commissioners assigned by any commission of sewers.

Quorum.

15. Three commissioners shall constitute a quorum at any which case the quorum now required by law shall be necessary.

General Powers of Commissioners.

16. The powers of commissioners of sewers acting within their jurisdiction shall extend to the following acts:—

- (1). To cleansing, repairing, or otherwise maintaining in a due state of efficiency any existing watercourse or outfall for water, or any existing wall or other defence against water, hereinafter referred to under the expression "maintenance of existing works :"
- (2). To deepening, widening, straightening, or otherwise improving any existing watercourse or outfall for water, or removing mill dams, weirs, or other obstructions to watercourses or outfalls for water, or raising, widening, or otherwise altering any existing wall or other defence against water, hereinafter referred to under the expression "improvement of existing works :"
- (3). To making any new watercourse or new outfall for water, or erecting any new defence against water, to erecting any machinery or doing any other act not hereinbefore referred to, required for the drainage, necessary supply of water for cattle, warping or irrigation of the area comprised within the limits of their jurisdiction, hereinafter referred to under the expression "the construction of new works :"

Provided,

- (1). That no person shall by virtue of this act be compelled to execute at his own expense any works which he would not have been compelled to execute, if this act had not passed :
- (2). That no work shall be deemed to be a new work that is in substitution for an old one, in cases where such old work is so much out of repair or so inefficient as to make it expedient to construct a new work in place thereof :
- (3). That full compensation shall be made for all injury sustained by any person by reason of the exercise by the commissioners of the above powers :
- (4). That the exercise of the foregoing powers shall be subject to the restrictions hereinafter mentioned.

17. The commissioners shall not be entitled to remove or otherwise interfere with any mill dam, weir, or other like obstruction, whereby the level of the water is raised for any milling or other purpose of profit, so as to injuriously affect the supply of water, otherwise than with the consent of the owner of such mill dam, weir, or other like obstruction, until the following things have been done ; that is to say—

- (1). Their right to do so has been determined in manner hereinafter mentioned :
- (2). Compensation has been made to all parties entitled for the injury which may be caused by such removal or interference.

18. For the purpose of determining the right of the commissioners to remove or otherwise interfere with any such dam, weir, or other like obstruction, there shall be decided, if the owner consent, by two or more justices assembled in petty sessions, but if he do not consent, by arbitration, the questions following ; that is to say—

- (1). Whether the proposed removal or interference is necessary for the effectual drainage of land within the jurisdiction of the commissioners :
- (2). Whether the proposed removal or interference will cause any injury to the owner :
- (3). Whether any injury that may be caused by the removal or interference is or is not of a nature to admit of being fully compensated for by money.

19. The consequence of any such decision shall be as follows ; that is to say—

- (1). If the decision is that such removal or interference is not necessary for the effectual drainage of the lands by the commissioners, the commissioners shall not be entitled to make the same :
- (2). If the decision is that such removal or interference is necessary for the purpose aforesaid, but that the injury to be caused thereby is not of a nature to be necessary, and that any injury that may be caused can be fully compensated by money, the commissioners shall be at liberty to make the same, upon making compensation as hereinafter mentioned.

20. Where the decision is that the commissioners are entitled to remove or interfere with any such mill dam, weir, or other obstruction, the commissioners shall take the same steps with respect to compensating the parties interested as are required to be taken by the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Act by purchasers in cases where they are authorised to purchase or take lands by special act.

21. The commissioners shall not by virtue of this act purchase any land for new works, otherwise than by agreement with the owner thereof, until they have obtained the sanction of Parliament in manner hereinafter mentioned.

22. The commissioners, before applying for the sanction of Parliament, shall do as follows ; that is to say—

- (1). Publish once at the least in the London Gazette, and once at least in each of three consecutive weeks in some newspaper circulating within the limits of their commission, an advertisement describing shortly the nature of the undertaking in respect of which the land is proposed to be taken, naming a place where a plan of the proposed undertaking may be seen at all reasonable hours, and stating the quantity of land that they require :

- (2). Serve a notice in manner hereinafter mentioned on every owner or reputed owner, lessee or reputed lessee, and occupier of such lands, defining in each case the particular lands intended to be taken, and requiring an answer stating whether the person so served assents, dissents, or is neuter in respect of taking such lands ; such notice to be served

By delivery of the same personally on the party required to be served, or, if such party is absent abroad, to his agent ; or

By leaving the same at the usual or last known place of abode of such party as aforesaid ; or

By forwarding the same by post in a prepaid letter addressed to the usual or last known place of abode of such party.

23. Upon compliance with the provisions hereinbefore contained with respect to advertisements and notices, the commissioners may present a petition to the inclosure commissioners. The petition shall state the land intended to be taken, and the purposes for which it is required. It shall pray that the commissioners may, with reference to such land, be allowed to put in force the powers of the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Act in relation to the compulsory taking of land, and such prayer shall be supported by such evidence as the inclosure commissioners require.

24. Upon the receipt of such petition, and upon proof to their satisfaction of the proper advertisements having been published and notices served, the inclosure commissioners shall take such petition into their consideration, and they may either dismiss the same, or they may, if they think fit, send an inspector to the district in which the land is situate, for the purpose of making inquiry as to the propriety of assenting to the prayer of such petition.

25. Before commencing his inquiry, the inspector shall give such notice as the inclosure commissioners direct of his intention to make the same, and of a time and place at which he will be prepared to hear all persons desirous of being heard before him on the subject matter of such inquiry.

26. Upon the completion of such inquiry, the inclosure commissioners may, by provisional order, empower the commissioners to put in force, with reference to the land mentioned or referred to in such order, the powers of the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Act in relation to the compulsory taking of land ; and it shall be the duty of the inclosure commissioners, as soon as conveniently may be, to take all proper steps for the confirmation of such provisional order by act of Parliament, and when so confirmed, it shall be deemed to be a public general act of Parliament, and to take effect accordingly ; but previous to such confirmation it shall not be of any validity whatever.

27. All costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the inclosure commissioners in relation to the obtaining any such act as aforesaid shall be paid by the commissioners out of the rates leviable by them in pursuance of this act, and applicable to the works with a view to which the provisional order was obtained.

28. Subject to the restrictions herein contained, the commissioners may purchase such lands or easements relating to lands as they may require for the purposes of this act; and the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the act amending the same, passed in the session of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 106, shall be incorporated with this part of this act, with the exceptions and subject to the conditions hereinafter contained; that is to say—

(1). There shall not be incorporated with this part of this act the sections and provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, sect. 16, whereby it is provided that the capital is to be subscribed before the compulsory powers are to be put in force; sect. 17, whereby it is provided that the certificate of the justices should be evidence that the capital has been subscribed; the provisions relating to the entry upon lands by the promoters of the undertaking, contained in sects. 84 to 91, both inclusive; sect. 123, whereby a limit of time for the compulsory purchase of land is imposed, the provisions relating to the manner of serving notices, and the provisions relating to access to the special act:

(2). In the construction of this part of this act and the said incorporated acts, this part of this act shall be deemed to be the special act, and the commissioners shall be deemed to be the promoters of the undertaking, and the word "land" or "lands" shall include any easement in or out of lands.

29. Previously to commencing any improvements in existing works, or any new works where such improvements or new works involve an expenditure of more than 1000*l.*, the commissioners shall cause plans of the proposed work and an estimate of the expense thereof, and of the area within which a rate will be required to be levied to meet such expense, to be made, together with a list of the names and addresses of the persons reputed to be proprietors of the land within such last-mentioned area, with the addition of the number of acres of which each person is reputed to be the proprietor; and shall publish their intention to execute such works two months before commencing the same, in manner following; that is to say—

By inserting in some newspaper circulating within the limits of their commission, once in every week during such period of two months, a notice explaining briefly the nature of the work, the amount of expense to be incurred, and the area of land within which a rate is proposed to be levied for meeting such expense, describing such area by reference to a deposited plan, or by boundaries, or in such other manner as the commissioners may think best calculated to give information of their intention, and stating a place within the limits of their commission at which the plan and estimate of the works and the list of reputed proprietors may be inspected at all reasonable hours:

By placing a copy of such notice for three successive Sundays on the church door of the principal church, or some one of the churches of the parish or parishes in which such works are to be done, or, in the case of any extra-parochial place, of some parish immediately adjoining thereto.

30. Any person interested may, at any time before the expiration of such two months as aforesaid, apply to the commissioners to correct the list of reputed proprietors, by inserting or expunging the name of any person, or by altering the number of acres appropriated by such list to any proprietor, and the commissioners shall hear any application so made, and shall amend the list accordingly; and the decision of the commissioners, in respect of such list, shall be final; and at the expiration of the period of two months, or of such further period as the commissioners may fix for the purpose of hearing any application made within such period of two months, the list, as settled by the commissioners, shall be conclusive evidence of proprietorship, for the purpose of ascertaining the proportion of dissenting proprietors, as hereinafter mentioned.

31. If, within such period of two months, the proprietors of one-half of the area of land within which a rate is, according to the notice proposed to be levied, declare in writing to the commissioners, by notice left at their office, that they are unwilling that such work should be executed, the commissioners shall take no further steps therein; but if no such declaration of dissent is made, the commissioners may, at the expiration of such period of two months, commence the proposed work, and repay, out of the rates to be levied by them within the area, all expenses incurred, not exceeding the estimate published in the notice.

32. If the commissioners are unable to discover the proprietor of any lands, they shall give notice to that effect in the list of reputed proprietors made by them, and such land shall, in the event of no proprietor proving his title to have his name inserted in the list before the period hereinafter named for the completion of the list, be altogether excluded in any computation that may be made of the proportion borne by the dissenting proprietors of any area of land, as hereinafter provided, to the aggregate number of the proprietors of such land.

33. Commissioners of sewers acting within their jurisdiction may, without the presentment of a jury, make any order in respect of the execution of any work, the levying of any rate, or doing any act which they might, but for this section, have made with such presentment; subject to this proviso, that any person aggrieved by any such order made by the commissioners without the presentment of a jury, may appeal therefrom in manner hereinafter mentioned.

Liabilities by reason of Tenure.

34. The commissioners may, with the consent of the enclosure commissioners, testified in writing under their common seal, commute, for such sums of money as they think expedient, the obligation imposed on any person, by reason of tenure, custom, prescription, or otherwise, to repair any walls, maintain any sewer, or do any other work within their jurisdiction.

35. Any commutation so made may be by way of gross or annual charge on the lands of the person in respect of which the original obligation arose; and any charge so created shall be recoverable by the commissioners in the same manner in which tithe rentcharge is recoverable, and shall have priority over all incumbrances created or to be created by any proprietor of the lands on which the same is charged.

36. The record of any such charge as aforesaid shall be deposited in the office of the clerk of the peace of the county in which the district, or the greater part of the district within the jurisdiction of the commissioners is situate; and such record, or any certified copy thereof, shall be receivable in evidence in all legal proceedings.

37. Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained as to commutation of liability, the liability of any person whomsoever to defray or contribute towards the expense of making, completing, altering, amending, or maintaining any sewer or drain, or any walls or works for protecting the land against the force or encroachments of the sea or of any river, or doing any other work within the jurisdiction of the commissioners, shall continue, and the same may be enforced as if this act had not passed; and the rates to be levied under this act shall be made only for purposes to which such liability does not extend.

Rating Powers.

38. The following regulations shall be observed, with respect to rates leviable by commissioners of sewers; that is to say—

First, as to the purposes of the rates:

Rates may be levied by commissioners of sewers for defraying all costs, charges, and expenses incurred or to be incurred by them under the authority of any act of Parliament, law, or custom:

Second, as to the incidence of the rates:

(1). A rate levied by the commissioners, for the purposes of defraying the expense of any improvements in existing works, or any new works, where such improvements or new works involve an expenditure of more than 1000*l.*, shall be deemed to be a special rate, and shall be deemed to be a tax on the owners of property, but, except such special rate, rates leviable by the commissioners shall be payable by the same persons, may be levied upon and payment thereof enforced against the occupier of such land, and his goods and chattels, in like manner as if the same were a rate due from such occupier, with this limitation, that no occupier shall be liable to pay on account of any owner any sum exceeding the rent due or that may accrue due to such owner during the period of his occupancy; and, subject to this proviso, that any occupier may, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, deduct the sum so paid by him from any rent due or to accrue due to such owner; and the receipt of the commissioners for any rate paid by the occupier under the circumstances mentioned in this section shall, to the extent of the monies therein expressed to be paid, be a discharge as against such owner of an equivalent amount of rent:

- (3). "Owner of land," for the purposes of this section, shall mean the person for the time being entitled to receive the rack-rent of the land in respect of which the rate is made on his own account, or who would be entitled to receive the same if such land were let at a rack-rent, including under the term "rack-rent" any rent which is not less than two-thirds of the net annual value of the land out of which the rent issues:

Third, as to the assessment of the rate:

- (4). Whenever the name of any owner or occupier liable to be rated to the sewers rate is not known to the commissioners, it shall be sufficient to assess and designate him in the rate as "the owner or occupier," as the case may be, of the land in respect of which the assessment is made, without further description:

Subject as aforesaid, and without the presentment of a jury, but with such right of appeal as hereinafter mentioned, sewers rates may be assessed, levied, and enforced in the same manner in which they have heretofore been assessed, levied, and enforced; but nothing in this section contained shall affect any agreement between landlord and tenant.

39. For the purpose of assessing the sewers rate, any person appointed by the commissioners may inspect, take copies of, or make extracts from any rate for the relief of the poor within the district; and if any officer having the custody of such last-mentioned rate refuses to permit any such inspection, or the taking of any such copies or extracts, he shall for each offence incur a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, to be recovered in a summary manner.

Mortgage of Rates.

40. The commissioners may, for the purposes of defraying any costs, charges, and expenses incurred or to be incurred by them under the authority of any act of Parliament, law, or custom, borrow, and take up at interest, on the credit of the rates authorised to be levied by them, any sums of money necessary for defraying such costs, charges, and expenses; and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any sums of money so borrowed, together with such interest as aforesaid, the commissioners may mortgage and assign over to the persons by or on behalf of whom such sums are advanced the rates or any of them; but the exercise of the above power shall be subject to the following regulations:—

- (1). The borrowing such money shall be sanctioned by an order of the inclosure commissioners:
- (2). Any money so borrowed may, by agreement with the mortgagee, be paid off by equal annual instalments of principal and interest, and such borrowing may be for such time, not exceeding thirty years, as the commissioners, with the sanction of the inclosure commissioners, determine in each case:

And in cases where the commissioners borrow any money for the purpose of defraying expenses in respect of which they have determined a part only of the district within their jurisdiction to be liable, it shall be the duty of the commissioners, as between the ratepayers of the district, to repay the money so borrowed, with interest thereon, out of rates to be levied on such part of the district only.

41. The clauses of the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847, with respect to mortgages to be created by the commissioners,

42. Where any notice is required to be given by the commissioners, such notice shall in all cases be sufficiently executed if signed by the clerk to the commissioners; and every notice purporting to be signed by such clerk shall be receivable in evidence before all legal tribunals, and in all legal proceedings, without any other proof.

43. All notices served by the commissioners on any proprietor or owner shall, if due service thereof has been made, be binding on all persons claiming by, from, or under such proprietor or owner, to the same extent as if such notices had been served on such last-mentioned persons respectively.

44. Except where a special mode of service is provided by this act, all notices required to be served by the commissioners upon any proprietor or owner of lands shall either be served personally on such parties, or be left at their last usual place of abode, if any such can, after diligent inquiry, be found; but in case any such parties are absent from the United Kingdom, and their last usual place of abode cannot be found, after diligent inquiry, such notices shall be left with the occupier of such lands, or if there be no such occupier, shall be affixed upon some conspicuous part of such lands.

45. If any proprietor or owner on whom notice is to be served is a corporation aggregate, or joint stock or other company, or body of proprietors or undertakers, such notice shall be left at the principal office of such corporation, company, or body, or if no such office can, after diligent inquiry, be found, shall be served on some agent, if any, of such corporation, company, or body; but if no such officer or agent can be found, it shall be left with the occupier of the lands, or if there be no such occupier, shall be affixed on some conspicuous part of such lands.

46. Except where a special mode of service is provided by this act, all notices required to be served by the commissioners upon the occupier of any land shall either be served personally on him or be left at his last usual place of abode, if any such can, after diligent inquiry, be found; and in case he is absent from the United Kingdom, and his last usual place of abode cannot be found, after diligent inquiry, it shall be affixed on some conspicuous part of such premises.

47. Where any order, requisition, or rate has been made by the commissioners, or any act done by them, without the presentment of a jury, in pursuance of the powers of this act, any person aggrieved by such order, requisition, or rate, may appeal to the court of quarter sessions against any such order, requisition, rate, or act, and the court may confirm, annul, or modify the same accordingly; but no such appeal shall be entertained unless it is made within four months next after the making of such order or requisition, or the making such rate, or the doing of such act, nor unless ten days' notice in writing of such appeal, previously to the quarter sessions, stating the nature and grounds thereof, is served on the commissioners, nor unless the appellant, within four days after the service of such notice, enter into recognisances, with two sufficient sureties, before a justice of the peace, conditioned duly to prosecute such appeal, and to abide the order of the court thereon.

48. If at any time after such notice of appeal has been given, and such recognisance has been entered into as aforesaid, it appears to the court of quarter sessions, on the application of either party, that the matter in question in such appeal consists wholly or in part of matters of mere account, or of engineering or other scientific questions, which cannot be satisfactorily tried by the court, it shall be lawful for such court to order that such matters, either wholly or in part, be referred to the arbitration of one or more persons, to be appointed by the parties, or, in case of disagreement, by the court; and the award made on such arbitration shall be enforceable by the same process as the order of the court of quarter sessions.

49. The provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, relating to compulsory references, shall be deemed to extend to arbitrations directed by the court of quarter sessions; and the word "court" in the said act shall be deemed to include the court of quarter sessions.

50. Where any questions are declared by this part of this act to be determinable, at the option of the owner, by justices or by arbitration, the owner shall be deemed to have declared his assent to the determination thereof by justices, unless he require the commissioners to refer the same to arbitration, by notice under his hand, served on the commissioners within ten days after he has received notice from them of their intention to have such questions determined; and where the justices have cognisance of the case, the same proceedings shall be had as are required under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1854, in case of a question of disputed compensation authorised to be settled by two justices; and where such questions are referred to arbitration, the same proceedings shall be had as required by the said act where any question of disputed compensation authorised to be settled by arbitration has arisen; subject to this proviso, that the costs of such arbitration shall be in the discretion of the arbitrators.

51. All penalties and sums of money directed to be recovered in a summary manner shall be recovered before two justices in manner directed by the act passed in the session holden in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, intituled "An Act to facilitate the Performance of the Duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions within England and Wales, with respect to summary Convictions and Orders," and of any act amending the same.

52. (2). To interfere with any river, canal, dock, harbour, lock, reservoir, or basin, or the supply of water to any river, canal, dock, harbour, lock, reservoir, or basin, so as to injuriously affect the navigation on such river, canal, dock, harbour, lock, reservoir, or basin, or the use or maintenance thereof, or to interfere with any towing-path so as to interrupt the traffic thereof, in cases where any corporation, company, undertakers, commissioners, conservators, trustees, or individuals are by virtue of any act of Parliament entitled to navigate on or use such river, canal, dock, harbour, lock, reservoir, or basin, or in respect of the navigation on or use of which river, canal, dock, harbour, lock, reservoir, or basin any corporation, company, undertakers, commissioners, conservators, and trustees, or individuals are entitled by virtue of any act of Parliament to the receipt of any tolls or other dues;

56. Any corporation, company, undertakers, commissioners, conservators, trustees, or individuals authorised by virtue of any act of Parliament to navigate on, or use any river, canal, dock, harbour, or basin, or to demand any tolls or dues in respect of the navigation on such river or canal, or the use of such dock, harbour, or basin, may, at their own expense, and on substituting other sewers, drains, culverts, and pipes, equally effectual, and certified as such by the surveyor of the commissioners or drainage board, take up, divert, or alter the level of sewers, drains, culverts, or pipes constructed by the commissioners or drainage board, and passing under or interfering with, or with the improvement or alteration of such river, canal, dock, harbour, or basin, or the towing-path of such river, canal, dock, harbour, or basin, and do all such matters and things as may be necessary for carrying into effect such taking up, diversion or alteration.

57. 58. No person shall, without the consent of the commissioners, cause any filthy or unwholesome water, or washings of manufactories or mines, or other foul or poisonous liquid, to flow into any watercourse within the jurisdiction of the commissioners of sewers; and any person offending against this enactment shall incur a penalty not exceeding 5*l.*, and a further penalty of 40*s.* for every day during which the offence is continued; but this section shall not apply to any person having a legal right to cause such water, washing, or liquid as aforesaid to flow into any existing watercourse.

59. Commissioners of sewers having jurisdiction within any area may, with the consent of the commissioners of sewers, having jurisdiction within any adjoining area, do and execute in such adjoining area any works that such first-mentioned commissioners might do and execute, within their own area, upon such terms as to payment or otherwise as may be agreed upon between the said bodies of commissioners; and any sums agreed to be paid by any body of commissioners, in pursuance of this section, shall be payable out of the rates leviable by such commissioners, in the same manner as if the expenses had been incurred within their own area; and the powers hereby given to one body of commissioners, in relation to another body of commissioners, may be exercised by them in relation to any drainage board constituted under this act, or by any such drainage board in relation to any other drainage board.

60. All powers given by this part of this act shall be deemed to be in addition to, and not in derogation of, any other powers conferred on commissioners of sewers by act of Parliament, law, or custom; and commissioners of sewers may exercise such other powers in the same manner as if this act had not passed; and notwithstanding anything in this act contained, commissions of sewers may be issued by her Majesty in manner in which the same have been issued previously to the passing of this act.

PART II.

Elective Drainage Districts.

63. Any persons or body of persons, corporate or unincorporate, being proprietors of not less than one-tenth part in acreage of any bog, moor, or other area of land that requires a combined system of drainage, warping, or irrigation, may, with the consent of the inclosure commissioners, and subject to the confirmation of Parliament as hereinafter mentioned, constitute such bog, moor, or other area a separate drainage district; subject to this proviso, that no place within the limits of any commission of sewers, or of any borough, or of any district under the management of a local board of health, or of improvement commissioners, shall form a separate drainage district, or any part thereof, without the consent of the commissioners of sewers, council, local board of health, or improvement commissioners having jurisdiction in such place.

64. The following proceedings shall be taken for the purpose of obtaining the sanction of the inclosure commissioners:—

- (1). A petition shall be presented to them, stating the proposed boundaries of the district, by reference to a map, or in such other manner as the inclosure commissioners think expedient: it shall be signed by such proprietors as aforesaid, and be supported by such evidence as the inclosure commissioners require:
- (2). Upon the receipt of such petition, the inclosure commissioners shall send an inspector to the district, for the purpose of making inquiries as to the propriety of constituting the proposed district, and as to the assent of the proprietors thereto:
- (3). The inspector shall proceed to the district, and shall ascertain the opinion of the proprietors in respect to the constitution of the district:
- (4). The inspector shall report the result of his inquiries to the inclosure commissioners, and they may, if satisfied with the propriety of constituting the district, and that the proprietors of two third parts of such bog, moor, or other area are in favour thereof, make a provisional order declaring the area in such order mentioned to be a drainage district:
- (5). Notice of the provisional order shall be published in the London Gazette, and in some other newspaper circulating in the district to which it relates, and copies thereof shall be served in such manner and upon such persons as the inclosure commissioners may require:
- (6). Upon the receipt of the report of the inspector, the inclosure commissioners may, by provisional order under their seal, constitute the area mentioned in the petition, with such alterations of boundaries, if any, as they think fit, a separate drainage district; and it shall be the duty of the inclosure commissioners, as soon as conveniently may be, to take all proper steps for the confirmation of such provisional to such confirmation it shall not be of any validity whatever:

- (7). No petition for constituting an elective drainage district under this act shall be entertained until the petitioners have given such security for costs as the inclosure commissioners require; and in the event of a drainage district not being constituted in pursuance of a petition, the petitioners shall pay all costs, charges, and expenses, including the expense incurred by the inclosure commissioners and their inspector; but in the event of the drainage district being constituted, such costs, charges, and expenses shall be a first charge on the rates leviable in the district in pursuance of this act.

65. The making of a provisional order shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this act in respect of proceedings required to be taken previously to the making of such provisional order have been complied with.

Drainage Boards.

66. The superintendence of matters relating to drainage within a drainage district shall be vested in a board, hereinafter called a drainage board, and such board shall be a body corporate, with perpetual succession and a common seal, having a capacity to hold lands for all the purposes of their constitution.

67. All powers by this act, or by any other act of Parliament, law, or custom, vested in or exercisable by commissioners of sewers within the limits of their jurisdiction may, upon the constitution of a drainage district, be exercised by the drainage board of such district within its limits; and all powers hitherto exercisable by commissioners of sewers within such district shall cease; subject to this proviso, that any person aggrieved by any order, requisition, or rate made by the drainage board, or any act done by them, may appeal therefrom in the same manner in which he is by this act authorised to appeal against any order, requisition, or rate made by the commissioners or any act done by them.

- (5). Any casual vacancy occurring in the board may be filled up by the board; but any person so chosen shall retain his office so long only as the vacating member would have retained the same if no vacancy had occurred:

- (7). If a member of a drainage board is adjudged bankrupt, or applies to take the benefit of any act for the relief or protection of insolvent debtors, or

- (8). Any person who acts as member of a drainage board without being duly qualified, or after he has become disqualified, shall incur a penalty not exceeding 50*l.*; and in any proceeding for the recovery of such penalty the burden of proving qualification shall be upon the person against whom such proceeding is taken:
- (9). All acts done by any meeting of a drainage board, or of any committee of a drainage board, or by any person acting as a member of a drainage board, shall, notwithstanding it may be afterwards discovered that there was some defect in the appointment of any such board or persons acting as aforesaid, or that they or any of them were or was disqualified, be as valid as if every such person had been duly appointed and was qualified to be a member.

69. Subject to any provisions to the contrary that may be made by the provisional order constituting the district, the following rules shall be observed with respect to the electors of drainage boards:—

- (1). The electors for members of a drainage board for any district shall be the persons who have during the year immediately preceding such election been rated to the sewers rate of the district, and have paid all sewers rates due from them at the time of their election:
- (2). Each elector shall vote according to the following scale; that is to say—
  - If the property in respect of which he is entitled to vote be rated upon a rateable value of less than 50*l.* he shall have one vote;
  - If such rateable value amount to 50*l.* and be less than 100*l.*, he shall have two votes;
  - If it amount to 100*l.* and be less than 150*l.*, he shall have three votes;
  - If it amount to 150*l.* and be less than 200*l.*, he shall have four votes;
  - If it amount to 200*l.* and be less than 250*l.*, he shall have five votes;
  - If it amount to 250*l.*, he shall have six votes;
  - If it amount to 500*l.* and be less than 1000*l.*, he shall have eight votes;
  - If it amount to or exceed 1000*l.*, he shall have ten votes.

PART III.

Power of private Owners to procure Outfalls.

72. Any person interested in land, who is desirous to drain the same, and in order thereto deems it necessary that new drains should be opened through lands belonging to another owner, or that existing drains in lands belonging to another owner should be cleansed, widened, straightened, or otherwise improved, may apply to such owner, who is hereinafter referred to as the adjoining owner, for leave to make such drains, or improvements in drains, through or on the lands of such owner.

73. Any such application as aforesaid shall be by notice in writing under the hand of the applicant, and shall be served on the owner, and also on the occupier if the owner be not the occupier, in manner in which notices are required to be served on owners and occupiers under the first part of this act. The notice shall state the nature of such drains, or improvements in drains, be accompanied by a map, on which the length, width, and depth of the proposed drains, or improvements in drains, shall be delineated, and shall further state the compensation, if any, which the applicant proposes to pay.

74. The adjoining owner may, by deed under his hand and seal, assent to such application, upon such terms, and on payment of such compensation as he may require; and any assent so given shall be binding on all parties having any estate or interest in the land, subject to the following provisions:—

- (1). That any arrangement entered into by any adjoining owner under any disability or incapacity, or not having power to assent to such application, except under the provisions of this act, shall not be valid unless the same is approved by two surveyors, one of whom is to be nominated by the applicant and the other by the adjoining owner; and each of such surveyors, if they approve of the arrangement, shall annex to the document containing the same a declaration to that effect, subscribed by them:
- (2). That any compensation to be paid by the applicant to the adjoining owner, in cases where such owner is under any disability or incapacity, or has not power to assent to such application, except under the provisions of this act, shall be applied in manner in which the compensation coming to parties having limited interests, or prevented from treating, and not making title, is applicable under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845:
- (3). That any occupier or person other than the owner interested in the lands shall be entitled to compensation for any injury he may sustain by the making of the proposed drains, or improvements in drains, so that the claim therefor be made within twelve months after completion of such drains, or improvements in drains, the amount of such compensation to be determined, in case of dispute, in the manner in which disputed compensation for land is required to be determined by the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845.

75. The applicant shall forward to the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or division of the county wherein the land is situate, the deed containing the assent of the adjoining owner to the proposed drains, or improvements in drains, who shall keep the same in his office as a record of the proceedings between the parties.

76. The adjoining owner shall be deemed to have dissented from the application made to him if he fail to express his assent thereto within one month after the service of the notice of application on him; and in the event of such dissent there shall be decided, by two or more justices in petty sessions assembled, unless the adjoining owner require the same within such period of one month, to be decided by arbitration, the questions following; that is to say—

- (1). Whether the proposed drains or improvements in drains will cause any injury to the adjoining owner, or to the occupier or other person interested in the lands:
- (2). Whether any injury that may be caused, is or is not of a nature to admit of being fully compensated for by money:

And the provisions of the first part of this act relating to the decision of the questions therein mentioned shall apply to the decision of the questions mentioned in this section.

The result of any such decision shall be as follows; that is to say—

- (1). If the decision is that no injury will be caused to the adjoining owner, to the occupier, or other parties interested in the lands, the applicant may proceed forthwith to make the proposed drains or improvements in drains:
- (2). If the decision is that injury will be caused to the adjoining owner, occupier, or other parties interested in the lands, but that such injury is of a nature to admit of being fully compensated by money, the may proceed to make the proposed drains or improvements in drains :

- (3). If the decision is that injury will be caused to the adjoining owner, occupier, or other parties interested in the lands, and that such injury is not of a nature to admit of being fully compensated by money, the applicant shall not be entitled to make the proposed drains or improvements in drains.

77. Where the compensation assessed by the justices or arbitrators under the last preceding section is payable to any owner or other person who is under any disability or incapacity, or is not entitled to receive the same for his own benefit, such compensation shall be applied in the manner in which the compensation coming to parties having limited interests, or prevented from treating and not making title, is applicable under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845.

78. The justices or arbitrators, as the case may be, in the event of their approving of a scheme of drainage as proposed by the applicant or as modified by themselves, shall cause a map thereof to be prepared, and shall certify under their hands the correctness of such map; and it shall be the duty of the applicant to forward the same to the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or division of the county wherein the land is situate, who shall keep the same in his office as a record of the proceedings between the parties.

79. After drains have been opened or improvements in drains made, in pursuance of part three of this act, it shall be lawful for the applicant, his heirs and assigns, for ever thereafter, from time to time as it becomes necessary, to enter upon the lands through which such drains have been opened or improvements made, for the purpose of clearing out, scouring, and otherwise maintaining the same in a due state of efficiency, and if such drains or improvements in drains are not kept so cleared out, scoured, and maintained in a due state of efficiency, the owner or occupier for the time being of the lands through, or on which such drains or improvements in drains are made, may clear out, scour, and otherwise maintain the same in a due state of efficiency, and recover the expenses incurred in such clearing out, scouring, or maintenance, in a summary manner, from the applicant, his heirs or assigns.

80. The owner for the time being of the land through or in which any drain may be opened, or improvements in drains made, in pursuance of Part III of this act, may fill up, divert, or otherwise deal with such drains or improvements in drains, on condition of first making and laying down in lieu thereof drains equally efficient; and any dispute as to the efficiency of drains so laid down shall be decided by two or more justices assembled in petty sessions.

81. Any person who wilfully obstructs any person making any drains or improvements in drains in pursuance of Part III of this act, and any person who wilfully dams up, obstructs, or in any way injures any drains or improvements in drains so opened or made, shall for each offence incur a penalty not exceeding 10*l.*, to be recovered in a summary manner.

82. All costs, charges, and expenses reasonably incurred by the adjoining owner in respect of any application made in pursuance of this part of this act shall be defrayed by the applicant.

83. Where any person is desirous, in pursuance of this part of this act, of constructing any drain by means whereof any brook, river, or other natural watercourse, will be diverted from its ordinary channel into any other brook, river, or natural watercourse, he shall cause a copy of the notice hereby required to be served on the adjoining owner to be published by advertisement once at least in each of three successive weeks in some local newspaper circulating in the district in which the drain proposed to be constructed is situate, and to be served in manner in which notices are required to be served under the first part of this act (where no special mode of service is prescribed) on all owners of land abutting upon the brook, river, or other natural watercourse into which the diversion is made, and situate within four miles of the point of junction, and shall deposit a copy of the map hereby required to accompany the notice served on the adjoining owner with the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or division of a county wherein the proposed drain is situate;

from such drain on the person proposing to make the same, and thereupon such owner shall be deemed to have dissented, and shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges under this part of this act as if he were the adjoining owner.

sonable office expenses shall respectively be allowed by the court. The official assignees shall not be entitled to any further remuneration in respect of any duties performed by them.

32. The messengers shall receive such remuneration by way of fees as general orders shall direct and allow: provided that the total net annual remuneration to be received by any messenger in the London district shall amount to, but not exceed, the sum of 500*l.*, and of any messenger in the country districts the sum of 400*l.* Any surplus of such fees upon the aggregate of the receipts of each year, after deducting the aforesaid salaries, and reasonable payments by the messengers for assistance, to be allowed by the court, shall be paid over by the several messengers, in such manner and at such times as general orders shall direct, to the credit of the chief registrar's account.

As to retiring Annuities, Compensations, and incidental Expenses.

33. The Lord Chancellor may, on a petition presented to him for that purpose, order that an annuity be paid to any commissioner or registrar, or to the accountant in bankruptcy, or taxing master, or other officer of the Court of Bankruptcy, not exceeding two-thirds of his salary, to be paid out of the chief registrar's account, when such person shall have served in such office for the full period of twenty years, and shall be above sixty-five years of age, or shall have been appointed to such office in or previous to the year 1832, and shall be desirous of retiring, or if such person shall, before the period of twenty years' service is completed, be afflicted with any permanent infirmity disabling him from the due execution of his office. The time during which such person shall have held office in the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors shall be reckoned as part of such service of twenty years.

34. If any person to whom an annuity shall be granted under this act shall be appointed to and accept any public office of an annual value less than the amount of such annuity, such person, during the time he may continue in such office, shall be entitled to receive only so much of his annuity as shall, together with the salary of such new office, be equal to such annuity. If the salary attached to such public office shall equal or exceed in amount such annuity, then during the time of his continuance in such office such annuity shall altogether cease.

35. The compensations now payable to the following holders of abolished offices,

Patentee of bankrupts,

The former commissioners of bankrupt,

The clerk of the banaper and other officers of the Lord Chancellor and the Court of Chancery, and the retiring annuities now respectively payable out of the funds standing to the credit of the chief registrar's account, shall continue to be paid out of the same funds; but the annual amount of the said compensations and retiring annuities shall be paid into the Bank of England to the credit of the chief registrar's account, by the Commissioners of the Treasury, out of the monies to be from year to year voted for that purpose by Parliament.

36. The funds standing to the account intituled "The Chief Registrar's Account" shall be subject to all such orders as have been heretofore duly made, or as shall from time to time be made, by the Lord Chancellor for payments thereout in respect of the salaries of clerks and other persons employed in the various offices of the several courts of bankruptcy, and for stationery, ink, and candles for the use of the same, and for rent and repairs of the buildings, and in respect of all expenses incidental to carrying this act into effect; and all accounts for such expenses shall be audited and allowed by the commissioners of the court in which they have been incurred before any order for payment shall be made.

As to Fees and Stamps.

37. The court fees heretofore payable in respect of public and private sittings in bankruptcy is abolished.

38. The percentage heretofore payable by the 54th section of the Bankrupt-law Consolidation Act, 1849, to the

of any matters of proceedings under this act may be varied or abolished by general orders; and the provisions of this act respecting stamps are hereby extended and applied to such stamps as may be required by general orders.

40. The fees by this act made payable, or any of them, may from time to time be varied or abolished by general orders; and other fees, but not of an amount higher than that by this act prescribed, may be fixed and imposed by such orders; and the provisions of this act respecting stamps are hereby extended and applied to such stamps as may be required by general orders.

41. Every document enumerated in the Schedule (B.) to this act annexed shall, in lieu of all fees thereupon, be printed or written upon vellum, parchment, or paper bearing the stamp duty set opposite to such documents respectively in such schedule, and having the word "bankruptcy" impressed on every such stamp: provided that the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, besides such impressed documents denoting fees, shall provide like stamps on adhesive paper; and all stamp duties and fees directed to be paid under this act may be paid by means of such stamps on adhesive paper affixed to documents requiring a stamp duty. Where any such document shall consist of more than one sheet, only the first sheet thereof shall have such stamp impressed or affixed thereon.

42. No document which by this act or by any general order is or shall be required to have a stamp impressed thereon shall be received or filed or be used in relation to any proceeding in the courts, or be of any validity for any purpose whatever, unless or until the same shall have the proper stamp impressed or affixed thereon: provided always, that if at any time it shall appear that any document which ought to have had such stamp has, through mistake or inadvertence, been received or filed or used without having such stamp, the courts may order that such stamp shall be impressed or affixed thereon; and when a stamp shall have been so impressed or affixed on such document, such document, and every proceeding in reference thereto, shall be as valid and effectual as if such stamp had been impressed or affixed thereon in the first instance: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall affect the provisions obtained in the 27th section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 83, or the provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, and that every stamp on adhesive paper affixed to a document shall be deemed a stamp impressed thereon.

43. If any judge, commissioner, registrar, accountant, master, official assignee, clerk, or any other officer of the courts of bankruptcy, or of any county court acting in matters under this act, shall, for anything done or pretended to be done under this act, or under colour of doing anything thereunder, fraudulently and wilfully demand or take, or appoint or allow any person whatsoever to take, for him or on his account, or for or on account of any person by him named, or in trust for him or for any other person by him named, any fee, emolument, gratuity, sum of money, or anything of value whatsoever, other than is allowed by this act, such person, when convicted thereof, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 500*l.*, and be rendered incapable, and is hereby rendered incapable, of holding any office or place under her Majesty.

44. If any such judge, commissioner, officer, or person shall fraudulently do, commit, or connive at any fraudulent act or practice in relation to any stamp used or required to be used in any matter under this act, or to any fee or sum of money collected or which ought to be collected by means of any such stamp or otherwise, or shall be guilty of any fraudulent act, neglect, or omission whereby any fee which ought to be collected by means of such stamp or otherwise shall be lost, or the payment thereof evaded, such judge, commissioner, officer, or person so offending shall be liable to be dismissed from his office or employment.

As to General Orders.

45. The Lord Chancellor shall, with the assistance of two commissioners, and subject to the provisions of this act, frame general orders for the following purposes:—

For regulating the practice and procedure of the Courts of Bankruptcy, and the several forms of petitions, orders, and other proceedings to be used in the said courts, in all matters under this act:

For regulating the duties of the various officers of such courts:

For regulating the fees payable and the charges and costs to be allowed with respect to all proceedings before such courts, and before the county courts acting in bankruptcy:

For regulating the practice and procedure upon appeals:

For regulating the filing, custody, and inspection of records:

And, generally, for carrying the provisions of this act into effect.

48. For regulating the practice and procedure of the county courts, and the place and times of sitting thereof, in matters under this act, general orders shall be framed in conformity with the provisions of this act, and subject to the sanction of the Lord Chancellor, by such judges of the said courts as the Lord Chancellor shall from time to time nominate for that purpose.

47. After such general orders shall have been so framed, they or any of them may be rescinded or varied, and other general orders may be framed in manner aforesaid; and all general orders so framed from time to time shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within one month after the approval thereof by the Lord Chancellor, if Parliament be then sitting, or if Parliament be not then sitting, within one month from the commencement of the then next session of Parliament.

As to the Sittings of the Court.

48. The London and District Courts of Bankruptcy shall sit for the dispatch of business daily throughout the year, Sunday, Christmas-day, Good Friday, Monday and Tuesday in Easter week, and days appointed for public fast or thanksgiving excepted.

49. During the time appointed by order for vacations in the High Court of Chancery the Lord Chancellor shall have full power and authority to regulate the sittings of the court, and appoint the attendance of such commissioner or commissioners as shall appear necessary for the due administration of justice in the said court.

As to the Practice and Procedure of the Court.

50. The several courts exercising jurisdiction under this act may, in all matters within their respective jurisdictions, take the whole or any part of the evidence either viva voce on oath, or by interrogatories in writing, or upon affidavit, or by commission abroad.

51. The commissioners may sit at chambers for the dispatch of such part of the business of their courts as can, without detriment to the public advantage arising from the discussion of questions in open court, be heard in chambers; and when sitting at chambers they shall have in all respects like power and jurisdiction as when sitting in court.

52. The registrars of the Court of Bankruptcy shall have power to make adjudication of bankruptcy, to receive the surrender of any bankrupt, to grant protection, to pass the last examination of any bankrupt in cases wherein the assignees and creditors do not oppose, to hold and preside at meetings of creditors, to audit and pass accounts of assignees, and to sit in chambers, and dispatch there such part of the administrative business of the court and such uncontested matters as shall be defined in general orders, or as the commissioner in any particular matter shall direct; but nothing herein contained shall empower a registrar to commit, or to hear a disputed adjudication, or any question of the allowance or suspension of an order of discharge. The registrar may adjourn any matter coming before him, for the consideration of the commissioner. The Lord Chancellor may, by order, from time to time authorise the registrar of any county court to exercise any of the powers hereby given to the registrars of the Court of Bankruptcy.

53. Any party shall, during the proceedings before a registrar, be at liberty to take the opinion of the commissioner upon any point or matter arising in the course of such proceedings, or upon the result of such proceedings, which shall be stated by the registrar in the shape of a short certificate to the commissioner, who shall sign the same if he approve thereof, and such certificate so signed shall be binding on all the parties to the proceeding; but every such certificate may be discharged or varied by the commissioner at chambers or in open court.

54. Parties and witnesses summoned before a registrar shall be bound to attend in pursuance of such summons, and shall be liable to process of contempt, in like manner as parties and witnesses are now liable thereto in case of default in attendance under any writ of subpoena; and all persons wilfully and corruptly swearing or affirming falsely before a registrar shall be liable to all the penalties, punishments, and consequences of perjury.

55. If any person examined before a registrar shall refuse or decline to answer, or to swear to or sign his examination when taken, the registrar shall refer the matter to the commissioner, who shall have power to order the person so acting to pay the costs thereby occasioned, if such person be compellable by law to answer such question or to sign such examination.

56. In any bankruptcy or any other proceeding within the jurisdiction of the court the parties concerned or submitting to such jurisdiction may, at any stage of the proceedings, by consent, state any question or questions in a special case for the opinion of the court, and the judgment of the court shall be final, unless it be agreed and stated in such special case that either party may appeal.

57. The parties may, if they think fit, agree that, upon the question or questions raised by such special case being finally decided, a sum of money, fixed by the parties or to be ascertained by the court, or in such manner as the court may direct, or any property, or the amount of any disputed debt or claim, shall be paid, delivered, or transferred by one of such parties to the other of them, either with or without costs.

58. The courts of bankruptcy may direct a registrar to attend at any place within the district of the court to which he is attached, for the purpose of holding any meeting of creditors, of receiving proof of debts, and generally for the prosecution of any bankruptcy or other proceeding under this act; and the travelling and incidental expenses of such registrar, and of any clerk or other officer attending him, incurred in so acting, shall be settled by such court, and paid out of the assets of the estate in respect of which such registrar has so acted; or if there be no such assets, or if the assets be insufficient, then out of the chief registrar's account; and such registrar so acting shall have and exercise all powers, except the power of commitment, vested in such court for the summoning and examination of persons or witnesses, and for requiring the production of books, papers, and documents: provided always, that all depositions and examinations of persons and witnesses taken before such registrar, and all acts done by him, shall be reduced to writing, and be signed by such registrar, and shall be annexed to and form part of the proceedings.

59. It shall be lawful for the judges of the Court of Appeal in Chancery to direct any question of fact to be tried and determined before themselves by the verdict of a special or common jury. The judges of the said Court of Appeal in Chancery may make all such rules and orders upon the sheriff or any other person, for procuring the attendance of a special or common jury for the trial of such question, as may now be made by any of the superior courts of common law at Westminster, and also may make any other orders which may be requisite for the purpose of such trial; and every such jury shall consist of persons possessing the like qualifications, and shall be struck, summoned, and balloted for, and called in like manner, as if such jury were a jury for the trial of any cause in any of the said superior courts; and every jurymen so summoned shall be entitled to the same rights, and be subject to the same duties and liabilities, as if he had been duly summoned for the trial of a civil action in any of the said superior courts; and every party to any such proceeding shall be entitled to the same rights, as to challenge and otherwise, as if he were a party to a cause in any of the said superior courts; and at the trial the jury shall be sworn to try the said question of fact, and a true verdict to give thereon, according to the evidence; and upon every such trial such court shall have the same powers, jurisdiction, and authority as any judge of the superior courts of common law sitting in nisi prius.

60. It shall be lawful for the judges of the Court of Appeal in Chancery respectively to direct one or more issue or issues to be tried in any court of common law, and either before a

61. In order to facilitate the business of the courts of bankruptcy in taking examinations, or the evidence of parties examined viva voce, the court may, in any matter of bankruptcy, or other proceeding within the jurisdiction of courts, direct the employment of a short-hand writer; and general orders shall direct under what regulations such short-hand writer shall be employed, and the amount of the remuneration to be allowed him, and the parties by whom such remuneration shall be paid.

62. Every short-hand writer so employed by the court shall in every case make in court the following declaration:—

"I, A. B., do solemnly and sincerely declare that I will faithfully and truly take down the questions and answers put to and given by persons to be examined in this matter, and will deliver true and faithful transcripts thereof, as the court shall direct."

63. Every warrant issued by any court under this act shall be under the seal of the court and the hand of the commissioner; and every summons shall be under the hand of the registrar, and under the seal of the court.

64. The courts shall cause to be sealed with the seal of the courts all such records, proceedings, documents, and copies of the same as are by this act, or shall be by general orders, required to be so sealed, and such other records, proceedings, documents, and copies of the same as the courts shall at any time direct.

65. No rule, order, warrant, or other proceeding or document required by this act to be in a form given in the schedules to this act, or to be given by any general order, shall be invalidated by reason of any want of form or omission therein, if such want of form or omission shall not, in the opinion of the court before which the same shall be brought, be calculated to mislead or prejudicially affect any party.

66. Every decision or order of the judge of any county court acting in bankruptcy under this act shall be subject to appeal to the Court of Appeal in Chancery, in like manner and under the same rules and regulations as are now directed with respect to appeals from the London and District Courts of Bankruptcy to the said Court of Appeal, or as may hereafter be directed by general orders.

67. The registrars, accountant in bankruptcy, master, official assignees, and messengers of the court in London and of the district courts of bankruptcy, and the registrars of the county courts acting in bankruptcy, shall make to the chief registrar, in such manner and form as general orders shall direct, annual returns of the business of their respective offices, and from such returns the chief registrar shall frame a general return, judicial and financial, as to all matters within this act, and such general return shall be laid before Parliament by the Lord Chancellor as early as may be after the completion thereof; and the returns to the chief registrar shall be kept by him of record, and shall be open to the inspection of persons desirous of inspecting the same, on payment of the fee for inspection of proceedings set forth in Schedule (B.) to this act.

As to the Buildings occupied for the Purposes of the Courts.

68. The building in Basinghall-street, in the city of London, called the Court of Bankruptcy, and the building in Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, called the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors in England, together with the pieces or parcels of ground on which the same are severally erected, shall vest in the Commissioners of her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings, and shall be appropriated to such purposes as the Lord Chancellor shall direct.

As to the Persons subject to this Act.

69. All debtors, whether traders or not, shall be subject to the provisions of this act; but no debtor who is not a trader shall be adjudged bankrupt except in respect of some one of the acts of bankruptcy hereinafter described as applicable to a non-trader.

As to Acts of Bankruptcy.

70. If any person, not being a trader, shall, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, depart this realm, or, being out thereby committed an act of bankruptcy: provided always, that before any adjudication in bankruptcy shall be made against the debtor under this section the following rules shall be observed:—

(1). A copy of the petition for adjudication shall be served personally on the debtor, either within the jurisdiction, or in such place or country, or within such limits abroad, as the court shall, upon application for that purpose, direct:

(2). Such copy petition shall have indorsed thereon a memorandum, in a form to be settled by a general order, specifying the time within which the debtor is to appear on such petition; and such time shall, when the service is to be made abroad, be the time which the court shall think reasonable, having regard to the place or country where the service is to be made:

(3). In no case shall the time for appearance be less than thirty days after service:

(4). If such personal service has not been effected, the court must be satisfied that every reasonable effort was made to effect the same, and that the attempts to serve such petition came to the knowledge of the debtor, and were defeated by his conduct:

(5). If, at the expiration of the time limited for appearance, the court shall, on the hearing of such petition, be satisfied that an act of bankruptcy has been committed within the meaning of this section, it may adjudge such debtor to be a bankrupt:

Provided always, that no non-trader, who shall be abroad at the time of the passing of this act, shall be deemed to remain abroad with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, until the expiration of six months after the passing of this act.

71. If any debtor, whether a trader or not, having been arrested or committed to prison for debt, or on any attachment for non-payment of money, shall, upon such or any other arrest or commitment for debt or non-payment of money, or upon any detention for debt, lie in prison, being a trader, for fourteen days, or, not being a trader, for two calendar months, or, having been arrested for any cause, shall lie in prison as aforesaid after any detainer for debt lodged against him, and not discharged, every such debtor shall thereby be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy; or if any such debtor, having been arrested, committed, or detained for debt, shall escape out of prison or custody, every such debtor shall be deemed to have thereby committed an act of bankruptcy from the time of such arrest, commitment, or detention: but no debtor shall be adjudged bankrupt on the ground of having lain in prison as aforesaid, unless, having been summoned, he shall not offer such security for the debt or debts in respect of which he is imprisoned or detained as the commissioner or registrar whose duty it would otherwise be to adjudicate shall deem reasonably sufficient.

72. If any debtor, whether a trader or not, shall file in the office of the chief registrar, or with the registrar of a district court of bankruptcy, or of a county court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy, a declaration in writing, in such form as general orders shall direct, signed by such debtor, and attested by a registrar of the court, or by an attorney or solicitor, that he is unable to meet his engagements, every such debtor shall be deemed thereby to have committed an act of bankruptcy at the time of filing such declaration, provided a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be filed by or against him within two months from the filing of such declaration.

73. If any execution shall be levied by seizure and sale of any of the goods and chattels of any trader debtor, upon any judgment recovered in any action personal for the recovery of any debt or money demand exceeding 50*l.*, every such debtor shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy from the date of the seizure of such goods and chattels: provided always, that, unless in the meantime a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against the debtor be presented, the sheriff or other officer making the levy shall proceed with the execution, and shall, at the end of seven days after the sale, pay over the proceeds, or so much as ought to be paid, to the execution creditor, who shall be entitled thereto notwithstanding such act of bankruptcy, unless the debtor be adjudged a bankrupt within fourteen days from the day of the sale, in which case the money so received by the creditor shall be paid by him to the assignee under the bankruptcy, but the sheriff or other officer shall not incur any liability by reason of anything done by him as aforesaid: provided also, that in case of bankruptcy, the costs and expenses of such action and execution shall be retained and paid out of the proceeds of the sale, and the balance only, after such payment, be paid to the assignees.

74. Wherever the goods and chattels of a debtor are sold under an execution upon any judgment recovered in any action or suit brought for the recovery of a debt, money demand, or damages against any debtor, exceeding 50*l.*, such goods and chattels shall in all cases, unless the court shall otherwise direct, be sold by the sheriff by public auction, and not by bill of sale or private contract, and such sale shall be publicly advertised by the sheriff on and during three days next preceding the day of sale.

75. The filing of a petition by or against a debtor, whether a trader or not, in any court having jurisdiction for the relief of insolvent debtors in insolvency or bankruptcy in any of her Majesty's dominions, colonies, or dependencies, and the adjudication of an act of insolvency or bankruptcy on such petition, shall, for the purposes of this act, be accounted and adjudged conclusive evidence of an act of bankruptcy committed by such debtor at the time of filing such petition, or of the filing the petition on which the adjudication of an act of insolvency or of bankruptcy shall have been made; and any creditor or creditors of such debtor whose debt or debts shall be of sufficient amount to enable him or them to petition for adjudication of bankruptcy under this act may, at any time within two months after notice of such adjudication shall have been given in the London Gazette, petition for adjudication of bankruptcy under this act against such debtor, and under such petition all such proceedings may be had and taken as are authorised and directed by this act.

As to an Act of Bankruptcy by Non-payment after Judgment Debtor Summons, and the Proceedings thereupon.

76. Every judgment creditor who is or shall be entitled to sue out against a debtor a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum, or to charge the debtor in execution, in respect of any debt amounting to 50*l.*, exclusive of costs, shall be entitled, at the end of one week from the signing of judgment, to sue out against the debtor, if a trader, or not being a trader, at the end of one calendar month, and whether he be in custody or not, a summons, to be called a judgment debtor summons, requiring him to appear and be examined respecting his ability to satisfy the debt.

77. Where, after the commencement of this act, a decree or order of a court of equity, or an order in bankruptcy or insolvency, or lunacy, directing the payment of money, is disobeyed by the debtor, the same having been duly served on him, and the person entitled to receive the money, or interested in enforcing payment of it, has obtained a peremptory order of the competent jurisdiction, fixing a day for payment, and the debtor does not, being a trader, within seven days, or, not being a trader, within two calendar months, after service on him of the peremptory order, or, such order having been duly served, within seven days after the day fixed by the peremptory order for payment (which shall last happen), pay the money, or secure or tender or compound for it, to the satisfaction of the creditor, the creditor shall be entitled at the end of those seven days to sue out against the debtor a judgment debtor summons.

78. The judgment debtor summons shall, unless the court shall in any case otherwise direct, issue according to the following rules:—

Where the debtor is in England, then out of the Court of Bankruptcy for the district in which the debtor usually lives, or at the time of the issuing of the summons happens to be:

Where the debtor is not in England, then out of the Court of Bankruptcy for the district in which is the debtor's usual or last known place of abode in England.

79. Where the debtor is in England, the summons shall be served personally, unless the court issuing the same shall in any case direct that service in some other manner shall be good service: where the debtor is not in England, the court, upon such evidence as shall satisfy it that the service will be effectual to give notice to the debtor, may order service to be made in such manner and form as it shall deem fit, and shall appoint a time by such order for the appearance of the debtor.

80. Where the debtor is in custody a duplicate of the summons shall be delivered to the sheriff or other person in whose custody he is, who shall bring him up according to the summons, at the costs of the summoning creditor.

81. If service of the summons be not effected, and the court is satisfied that the debtor is keeping out of the way to avoid service, it may order that one or more notices be inserted in the London Gazette, and in one or more newspapers published in the district in which is the debtor's usual or last known place of abode, requiring him to appear on a day named, being not less than fourteen days after the publication of the first notice.

82. Upon the appearance of the debtor he may be examined on oath, by or on behalf of the creditor and by the court, respecting his ability to satisfy the debt, and for the discovery of property applicable in that behalf, and shall be bound to produce, on oath or otherwise, such books, papers, and documents in his possession or power relating to property applicable, or alleged to be applicable, to the satisfaction of the debt, as the court shall think fit, and to sign his examination when reduced into writing; and any debtor refusing to be sworn, or who shall upon examination refuse or wilfully fail to discover fully and truly, to the best of his knowledge and belief, all his property, real and personal, inclusive of his rights and credits, and to produce all books, papers, and documents in his possession or power relating thereto, shall be liable to be committed by the court as in the case of a bankrupt.

83. If, after service of such summons, or due notice thereof, as aforesaid, the debtor shall not pay the debt and costs, or secure or compound or the same to the satisfaction of the creditor, the court may, on the appearance of the debtor, or if he shall not appear, having no lawful impediment allowed by the court, adjudge him bankrupt, without the presentation of a petition for adjudication or other proceeding; and where the debtor has not appeared, notice of such adjudication shall be served upon him in like manner as herein provided with respect to service of the summons.

84. The debtor shall be allowed seven days from such notice, or such further time as the court shall think fit, for appearing to shew cause against the adjudication; and if he appear within the time allowed, and shew sufficient cause, the adjudication may be annulled; otherwise, at the end of the time allowed, or on the judgment of the court against the sufficiency of the cause shewn, the adjudication shall become absolute, and notice thereof shall be forthwith given in the London Gazette; and the adjudication shall have relation back to the service of the summons, or the insertion of the first notice in the London Gazette, as the case may be; and the stamp duty payable upon the presentation of a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy shall be paid in respect of adjudication under this section, or under the last preceding section, by the official assignee, or creditors' assignee, as the case may be, out of the first monies that shall be received under the estate of the bankrupt.

85. The provisions contained in sect. 260 of the Bankrupt-law Consolidation Act, 1849, relating to the committal of a person refusing to be sworn, or doing or omitting the other acts or things therein mentioned, shall apply to a debtor appearing on a judgment debtor summons.

As to Petitions for Adjudication of Bankruptcy, and the Proceedings thereupon.

86. Any debtor may petition for adjudication of bankruptcy against himself, and the filing of such petition shall be an act of bankruptcy, without any previous declaration of insolvency by such debtor.

87. Proceedings to obtain adjudication of bankruptcy shall be by petition, on the oath of the petitioner. Every such petition shall be filed of record, and prosecuted as directed by this act; and from and after the filing of such petition, in the case of a debtor petitioning against himself, and from and after adjudication, in the case of a petition filed against a debtor who shall be adjudged bankrupt, the bankrupt personally, and all his estate and effects, of what nature or kind soever, shall be subject to the law of bankruptcy.

88. Every petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, except as hereinafter provided, shall be filed and prosecuted in the Court of Bankruptcy within the district of which such debtor shall have resided or carried on business for the six months next immediately preceding the time of filing such petition, or for the longest period during such six months; but the court in London may order any such petition to be prosecuted in any district, with or without reference to the district in which the debtor shall have so resided or carried on business, or may consolidate the proceedings or any part thereof under two or more petitions for adjudication of bankruptcy, or may impound any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, or judgment debtor summons, and the proceedings thereunder, or any part thereof, upon such terms as the court shall think fit, or may transfer any petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, or judgment debtor summons, and the proceedings thereunder, and the prosecution or further prosecution thereof, from the court in any one district to the court in any other district, or to a county court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy; and the court to which any such transfer shall be made may remove the official assignee, and appoint a new official assignee to any such bankruptcy.

89. The amount of the debt of any creditor petitioning for adjudication of bankruptcy against a debtor, whether a trader or not, shall be as follows; that is to say—

The debt of a single creditor, or of two or more persons being partners, shall amount to 50*l*. or upwards:

The debt of two creditors shall amount to 70*l*. or upwards:

The debt of three or more creditors shall amount to 100*l*. or upwards:

Every person who has given credit to any debtor upon valuable consideration for any sum payable at a certain time, which time shall not have arrived when such debtor committed an act of bankruptcy, may so petition or join in petitioning, whether he shall have any security for such sum or not.

90. The debt of the petitioning creditor of any debtor not being a trader, and not being at the time a prisoner against whom such creditor would have been entitled to obtain a vesting order in insolvency if this act had not passed, must be a debt contracted after the passing of this act; and the judgment debtor summons must be a summons in respect of a debt contracted or of a liability incurred after the passing of this act.

91. If the debt stated by the petitioning creditor in his affidavit, or in his petition for adjudication, to be due to him from any debtor, shall not be really due, or if, after a petition for adjudication of bankruptcy filed, it shall not have been proved that the person against whom such petition has been filed was liable to an adjudication of bankruptcy at the time of the filing of such petition, and it shall also appear that such petition was filed fraudulently or maliciously, the courts shall and may, upon petition of any person aggrieved by such petition, examine into the same, and order satisfaction to be made to him for the damages by him sustained.

92. A petition for adjudication of bankruptcy, or judgment debtor summons, against any debtor indebted in the amount aforesaid to any co-partnership duly authorised to sue and be sued in the name of a public officer or agent of such co-partnership, may be filed or sued out by such public officer or agent as the nominal petitioner for and on behalf of such co-partnership: provided such public officer or agent shall, in a declaration signed by him, in such form as general orders shall direct, declare that he is such public officer or agent, and that he is authorised to sue.

93. Every debtor petitioning against himself shall file in court a full, true, and accurate statement, verified by the oath of the petitioner, of his debts and liabilities of every kind, and of the names and residences of his creditors, and of the causes of his inability to meet his engagements, within such time after filing his petition, and in such form, as general orders shall direct.

94. Where a debtor petitions for adjudication against himself, and knows or verily believes the debts justly due and proveable under the bankruptcy to amount in the whole to a sum not exceeding 300*l*., such fact shall be stated on oath, and if he be resident within the metropolitan district, as herein defined, he shall file his petition in the London Court of Bankruptcy; and where such debts shall not exceed 300*l*., and the debtor shall not be resident in the metropolitan district, he shall file his petition in the county court for the district in which he shall have resided for the six months next before the filing of his petition, or for the longest period during those six months, unless he is in custody, and then in the county court for the district in which he is in custody; but such court, if it make adjudication, shall transfer the proceedings to the county court in which the debtor, if not in custody, would have been required to petition.

95. Every debtor who shall present a petition for adjudication whilst a prisoner in any prison or gaol shall by writing give notice to the keeper of such gaol or prison of his intention so to do, and shall in his petition state that such notice has been given.

96. If the petitioning creditor shall not proceed and obtain adjudication within three days after his petition shall have been filed, or within such extended time as shall be allowed by the court, the court may, at any time on the expiration of such three days, or of such extended time, as the case may be, upon the petition of any other creditor to the amount required to constitute a petitioning creditor, proceed to adjudicate on such last-mentioned petition. If a debtor petitioning against himself does not obtain adjudication within twenty-four hours after filing such petition, the court may proceed to adjudge the debtor a bankrupt on the petition of any competent creditor.

97. In the computation of debts for the purposes of any petition under this act there shall be reckoned as debts—

(1). Sums due to creditors holding mortgages or other available securities or liens, after deducting the value of the property comprised in such mortgages, securities, or liens:

(2). Such interest and costs as shall be due in respect of any of the debts:

But there shall not be reckoned—

(2). Debts barred by any statute of limitations.

As to Adjudication of Bankruptcy against Pauper and other Prisoners for Debt.

98. If any debtor, whether a trader or not, now being or who shall be imprisoned for any debt or demand, shall through poverty be unable to petition the proper court for an adjudication of bankruptcy against himself, he shall be at liberty to petition in form pauperis, upon making an affidavit that he has not the means of paying the fees and expenses usually payable in respect of a petition by a debtor for an adjudication of bankruptcy; such affidavit may be sworn before the gaoler of the prison where such debtor is confined, and such gaoler is hereby empowered and required to take such affidavit, and swear the deponent thereto, without fee or reward.

99. Every person so petitioning in form pauperis as aforesaid shall, if not previously discharged by a registrar, be brought up to the county court of the district at its next sitting after the presentation of such petition, and shall be examined by the court touching his estate and effects, debts, dealings, and transactions; and if the court shall be satisfied with such examination it shall make an order of adjudication of bankruptcy against the petitioner, and, if it think fit, grant an order of protection to the petitioner.

100. The gaoler of every prison in England or Wales within the walls, rules, or liberties whereof any person shall be in custody upon any process whatsoever, for or by reason of any debt, claim, or demand whatsoever, shall on the first day of every month, or if such day shall happen to be Sunday, then on the day next following, make a return under his hand of the name of every such person, and the date of his or her imprisonment, and the nature and amount of the debt or demand, debts or demands, for which he or she is imprisoned or in custody, and whether he or she is willing or refuses to petition the Court of Bankruptcy, or is unable to do so by reason of poverty, or in such other form and manner, and with such particulars, as any general orders shall direct. Such return shall also include the names and addresses of every creditor at whose suit each such prisoner is imprisoned or detained, and shall be made by gaolers of prisons situate within the London district to the London court, and by the gaolers of prisons within the country districts to the district court of bankruptcy, or the county court having jurisdiction in bankruptcy, within the jurisdiction of which the gaol is situate, as the case may be.

101. The commissioner or county court judge, as the case may be, shall in every case, on receiving such return, make an order that a registrar of the court of bankruptcy or of the county court of the district in which the gaol is situate shall attend at the gaol on a day to be named, being at least seven and not more than twenty-one days from the date of such return. Notice of such order shall be forthwith given to the gaoler, and also to the execution and detaining creditors of every prisoner included in such return. On the day named in the order the registrar shall attend at the prison, and examine every prisoner included in such return who shall have been in prison, being a trader, for fourteen days, or, not being a trader, for two calendar months, touching his estate and effects, debts, dealings, and transactions. The registrar shall also ascertain the last place of abode and business of each such prisoner within the six months next prior to his imprisonment. The registrar shall have power to make an order of adjudication in bankruptcy against every such prisoner, and to grant him protection, and to make an order for his release from prison, and shall also direct in what court such adjudication shall be prosecuted, having regard to the amount of debts, and the place of trade or residence of the prisoner within the six months next preceding his imprisonment. The registrar shall certify the particulars of each case to the court of which he is registrar.

102. If the prisoner shall refuse to appear or to be sworn, or to answer all lawful questions of such registrar, or of the execution or detaining creditor, or of any other creditor who shall be present, respecting his debts, liabilities, dealings, and transactions, or to make a full discovery of his estate and effects, and of all his books of account, or to produce the same, or to sign his examination when taken, the registrar shall report the same to the court, and the court may, by warrant under the hand and seal of the judge or commissioner, commit him to the common gaol of the county, there to be kept, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding one month, and the court may at the same time adjudge such prisoner bankrupt: provided that if after such adjudication the bankrupt shall, before the period of such commitment has expired, submit to be examined, and in all things conform to the jurisdiction of the court, he shall have in all respects the same benefit as if he had submitted to the court in the first instance.

103. Every adjudication against any prisoner for debt so brought up as aforesaid shall, unless the court shall otherwise direct, have relation back to the date of his commitment or detention, as the case may be, and shall be as valid and effectual for all purposes as if it had been made under any other of the provisions of this act.

104. No person who is in custody solely under or by reason of any warrant or order made or issued by, or by the authority of, a judge, under the provisions of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 127, or of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, or by the authority of any court having the power to commit any person to prison upon or by reason of any order or judgment, wherever there shall have been recovered a sum for debt not exceeding 20*l.*, exclusive of costs, shall be included in the return so directed to be made by gaolers as aforesaid, or released from such imprisonment by virtue of any order to be made by the registrar as aforesaid, or be entitled to petition in forma pauperis under this act.

105. Every judge, in acting under the last-mentioned statutes, and in deciding whether the party summoned before him has then, or has had since the judgment obtained against him, sufficient means and ability to pay the debt or damages, or costs, so recovered against him, either altogether or by any instalment or instalments as ordered, shall take into consideration all the debts and liabilities of the party so summoned, and his conduct in disposing of his money or property since the judgment was given.

As to Lunatic Prisoners for Debt.

106. If any person, being or alleged to be of unsound mind, shall be in prison for debt, the gaoler shall forthwith require a justice of the peace for the county or place wherein such prison shall be, to visit such debtor, and to inquire into his state of mind; and such justice shall call to his assistance two duly qualified medical practitioners, each of whom shall be a physician, surgeon, or apothecary, and each of whom shall separately examine such debtor; and if such two medical practitioners shall each sign a certificate with respect to such debtor, according to the form in Schedule (H.) to this act annexed, and such justice shall be satisfied from his own view, that such debtor is of unsound mind, he shall certify the same to the proper court, and thereupon the court may appoint some person to represent such debtor, and direct such proceedings to be taken for adjudication in bankruptcy against him as the court shall think fit; and all proceedings under such adjudication shall be had and carried on in the same manner, and with the like effect, as if such prisoner had been of sound mind, and had presented a petition to the court for adjudication of bankruptcy, or as near thereto as the difference of circumstances will permit.

107. Any justice of the peace of the county or place aforesaid may thereupon remove such prisoner from such gaol, and may cause him to be sent to the asylum of the county in which such gaol shall be situate, in order that he may be placed under care and treatment as a lunatic; and such removal shall not be considered as an escape or final discharge from such gaol; and such prisoner shall thereafter be dealt with in all respects as a pauper lunatic, and shall be subject to the acts of Parliament for the time being in force respecting pauper lunatics, or as near thereto as circumstances will permit: provided nevertheless, that in the event of his recovery from his lunacy, he shall, if still liable to be detained in custody as a debtor, be remitted to the gaol from whence he was received.

As to Procedure after Adjudication.

108. Immediately on adjudication it shall be the duty of the official assignee to take possession of the bankrupt's estate, and to retain possession thereof until the appointment of a creditors' assignee; but if such official assignee, or if the court, upon the representation of any creditor, shall be of opinion that the keeping possession of the bankrupt's property is not requisite for the due protection of the creditors, such possession shall not be continued.

109. As soon as conveniently may be after adjudication shall have become absolute, the court shall appoint a meeting of the creditors, of which ten days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette, and which meeting shall be held at such time and place as the court shall appoint; and at such meeting a registrar, or such other person as the court shall appoint for that purpose, shall preside, and receive the proofs of the debts of the creditors. The official assignee shall attend, and give to the meeting the fullest information in his power of the estate and effects of the bankrupt, and of the debts due from his estate; and it shall be lawful for the majority in number and value of the creditors present at such meeting, or at any adjournment thereof, to resolve and determine that the proceedings in the bankruptcy shall be transferred to, and thenceforth prosecuted in, the county court of any district other than the metropolitan district, and the court shall order the same accordingly, upon being satisfied that such resolution was duly made. At this meeting a majority in value of the creditors present shall determine whether any or what allowance for support shall be made to the bankrupt up to the time of passing his last examination.

110. In case, at such meeting or at any other meeting of creditors, any proposal shall be made by or on behalf of the bankrupt which it shall appear to the major part in value of the creditors then present ought to be accepted, or if it shall appear to the majority in value of the creditors present at any meeting to be desirable on any ground to resolve, and such majority shall resolve, that no further proceedings be taken in bankruptcy, the meeting shall be adjourned for fourteen days, in order that notice of such resolution may be given to every creditor by the official or creditors' assignee, which shall be done accordingly; and if at such adjourned meeting a majority in number, representing three-fourths in value of the creditors present, shall so resolve, the proceedings in bankruptcy shall be suspended, and the estate and effects of the bankrupt shall be wound up and administered in such manner as such majority shall direct; and the bankrupt, having made a full discovery of his estate, shall be entitled to apply for an order of discharge.

111. From and after the passing of this act no attestation shall be required to give effect to the admission referred to in the 123rd section of the Bankruptcy Law Consolidation Act, under this act shall not be necessary to set forth or specify any question, or any part of the examination of the person so committed, but it shall be sufficient to refer in the warrant to the examination or deposition of the person as remaining on the file of proceedings, and to specify in the said warrant the precise date of the examination or deposition so referred to; and such warrant shall be in the form contained in Schedule (C.) to this act: provided, however, that in every case in which any person shall be so committed for refusing to answer, or for not fully answering, any question put to him, every such question shall be specified in the examination or deposition of the person committed remaining on the file of proceedings, and so referred to as aforesaid; and provided also, that a copy of the said examination or deposition so referred to shall be delivered personally to the person committed within twenty-four hours next after his actual commitment to prison; and in default of the said copy being delivered, the person committed shall be discharged from custody, either by the court or by the judge before whom such person may be brought by habeas corpus, with such costs, if any, as the said court or judge may deem just.

113. If any person so committed shall sue forth any writ of habeas corpus in order to be discharged from such commitment, he shall not be discharged by reason of any mere matter of form; but if the court or judge before whom he shall be brought, upon inspection and consideration of the whole of the examination or deposition of such person, shall be of opinion that the answer or answers of such person is or are satisfactory, the court or judge may order the person so committed to be discharged.

114. The court shall have power to dispose, for the benefit of the creditors, of any estate or interest, at law or in equity, which, at adjudication or afterwards, before order of discharge, a bankrupt has in any copyhold or customary land, and to make an order vesting the land, or such estate or interest as the bankrupt has therein, in such person and in such manner as the court shall think fit.

115. Where, under any settlement or will, a bankrupt non-trader shall be entitled to a life estate, in remainder expectant upon the death or deaths of any previous tenant or tenants for life, with any remainder over to the bankrupt's issue, or the heirs of his body, or any of them, as purchasers, the life estate of such bankrupt non-trader shall not be sold before it falls into possession without an express direction of the court.

As to the Choice of a Creditors' Assignee.

116. At the first meeting of creditors, or any adjournment thereof, it shall be competent to the majority in value of the creditors who have proved debts to choose an assignee or assignees of the bankrupt's estate and effects, and to be called the creditors' assignee: provided that the court shall have power to reject any person so chosen who shall appear to such court unfit to be such assignee, and upon such rejection a new choice of creditors' assignee shall be made.

117. Upon the appointment of the creditors' assignee, all the estate, both real and personal, of the bankrupt, shall be devested out of the official assignee, and vested in the creditors' assignee.

118. The official assignee shall forthwith render to the creditors' assignee a full and particular account or balance-sheet of the bankrupt's estate, and of all receipts, payments, and other transactions of such official assignee, and also a list of all the creditors of the bankrupt who have proved their debts against the estate.

119. The creditors' assignee shall, in the presence of a registrar, audit such account, and may call for such information from the official assignee as he possesses concerning the estate. The account shall be audited in the presence of the judge of the court, in cases where the registrar of such court is also the official assignee. A printed copy of such account of the official assignee, when audited, shall, unless the registrar or the judge, as the case may be, shall otherwise direct, be sent by post by the creditors' assignee to every creditor who has proved.

120. The court shall give such directions as it may deem expedient with respect to the custody and inspection of the creditors' assignee, with withhold possession of the books of account of the bankrupt, or to claim any lien thereon.

121. The majority in value of the creditors present at the meeting for choice of a creditors' assignee shall determine whether any security shall be given by such assignee, and if so, the amount and nature thereof; and such security may, if the creditors so determine, be by way of bond given to any registrar of the court or his successors, who are hereby authorised to sue thereon. At the same meeting, or at any other meeting called for the purpose, the majority in value of the creditors present may also determine whether a manager shall be appointed to collect and wind up the estate, under the inspection of the creditors' assignee, or of a committee of creditors, and may appoint such person, with such remuneration out of the estate, and generally upon such terms, for such period, and with such directions, as the majority shall think fit.

122. When the election of an assignee shall have been accepted by the person elected, and confirmed by the court, the court shall, by certificate under the hand of the commissioner and the seal of the court (to be called the certificate of appointment), declare such creditors' assignee to have been duly elected, and appoint him to the said office accordingly. Such appointment shall be final, and shall not be subject to review or appeal, except as hereinafter provided.

124. A majority in number and value of the creditors may, at any meeting duly called for the purpose, remove the creditors' assignee or manager, or accept of his resignation; and one-fourth in value of the creditors who have proved may at any time apply to the court, by petition, for the removal of the creditors' assignee or manager; and if on the hearing of such petition the court shall be of opinion that sufficient reason has been shewn, it may remove such creditors' assignee or manager, and appoint a meeting of the creditors to be held for electing a new creditors' assignee; and if the assignee shall die, resign, or be removed, or remain abroad for three months at any one time, any creditor may apply to the court to appoint a meeting for electing a new creditors' assignee, and the court may accordingly appoint a meeting, whereof at least seven days' previous notice shall be given in the London Gazette, and such meeting may elect a new creditors' assignee accordingly.

126. In all cases of the election of a new creditors' assignee the proceedings shall take place in the like manner as is hereinbefore provided in the case of the first election, and the new creditors' assignee shall have the same powers and perform the same duties as the creditors' assignee first chosen, and shall call to account such creditors' assignee, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, as the case may require.

128. No valuation of a bankrupt's property shall be made unless the court shall so direct; and any valuation required by the creditors shall be made in such manner and upon such terms as general orders shall from time to time direct.

As to the Rights and Duties of the Creditors' Assignee.

127. The creditors' assignee shall manage, and, except as herein provided, realise and recover the estate belonging to the bankrupt, wherever situated, and convert the same into money, and he shall pay all monies not necessarily retained for current expenses, all Exchequer bills, India bonds, and all other public securities, and all bills, notes, and negotiable instruments belonging to the estate, forthwith upon receipt thereof, into the Bank of England, to the account of the accountant in bankruptcy, unless, in the case of any adjudication in a country distriet, there shall be no branch of the Bank of England in the locality, and then into such bank as the court shall direct, to the credit of an account to be opened in such bank by such assignee in his official character.

128. The official assignee shall collect, realise, and recover every debt due to the estate the amount of which shall not exceed the sum of 10£., and shall pay all sums so collected, realised, and recovered forthwith into the Bank of England, or otherwise in manner in the next preceding clause provided; and as to all such sums of money, he shall be and shall be deemed sole assignee of the estate, notwithstanding the appointment of a creditors' assignee.

129. The creditors' assignee shall, at the end of three months from and after his appointment, and thenceforth at the expiration of every succeeding three months, render to the official assignee, in the presence of the registrar, a debtor and creditor account of all sums received and paid on account of the bankrupt or his estate, verified on oath as a full, true, and faithful account of his receipts and payments as such creditors' assignee; and the vouchers for such account, and all books of account in his possession or power, together with his bankers' pass-book, shall be produced by him to the official assignee, who shall examine the same, and if he shall be dissatisfied with such account, the same, or any part thereof, or any matter arising thereon, shall be inquired into and considered by the registrar, in the presence of the official and creditors' assignee; and if no creditors' assignee be appointed the official assignee shall in like manner render the account herein required to the registrar, who shall examine the same: provided, that in the case of county court registrars, their accounts, as official assignees, shall be in like manner rendered to, and examined and passed by, the judges of their respective courts.

130. Forthwith after the passing of each such account of the creditors' assignee, a copy thereof, or a statement showing the nature and result of the transactions and accounts of the assignee, shall be made out by the official assignee, and sent by him in a printed form through the general post to every creditor who has proved under the bankruptcy.

131. In every case of a lease or an agreement for a lease it shall be lawful for the assignees to elect to take the same and the benefit thereof, and to keep possession of the premises up to some quarter or half-yearly day on which rent is made payable by the same lease or agreement, such day not being more than six months from the adjudication of bankruptcy, and upon such day to decline such lease or agreement for a lease.

132. Any mortgagee, with the leave of the court first obtained, may bid at any sale of the mortgaged property.

133. If it shall appear to any meeting of the creditors summoned by the assignees, by notice stating the object of the meeting, and at which three-fourths in value of the creditors shall be present or represented, that the debts of any bankrupt can be discharged by means of money raised by way of mortgage or pledge of any of his property, and such meeting shall pass a resolution accordingly, it shall be lawful for the assignees, when thereunto authorised by order of the court, to execute such mortgage or pledge, with or without powers of sale and other powers, and in such manner in all respects as shall be specified in such order; and the court may order the execution of such mortgage or pledge by any other necessary parties, and give all necessary directions for the purpose of carrying into effect the resolution of the creditors.

134. The court may order such portion of the pay, half-pay, salary, emolument, or pension of any bankrupt as, on communication from the court, the Secretary of State for War, or the Secretary of State for India, or the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, or the Commissioners of the Customs or Excise, or the chief officer of the department to which such bankrupt may belong or may have belonged, or under which such pay, half-pay, salary, emolument, or pension may be enjoyed by such bankrupt, may officially sanction to be paid to the assignees, to be applied in payment of the debts of such bankrupt; and such order and sanction being lodged in the office of her Majesty's Paymaster-General, or of the Secretary of State for India, or of any other officer or person appointed to pay, or paying, any such pay, half-pay, salary, emolument, or pension, such portion of the said pay, half-pay, salary, emolument, or pension as shall be specified in such order and sanction shall be paid to such assignees until the court shall make order to the contrary.

135. If any bankrupt be a beneficed clergyman, the assignees may apply for and obtain a sequestration of the profits of the benefice of such bankrupt, which profits shall form part of the bankrupt's estate, and be applied accordingly; and the certificate of appointment of such assignees shall be a sufficient authority for the granting of such sequestration, without any writ or other proceeding to authorise the same, and such sequestration shall accordingly be issued as the same might have been issued upon any writ of levari facias founded upon any judgment against such bankrupt: provided always, that the sequestrator shall allow out of the benefice to the bankrupt, whilst he performs the duties of the parish or place, such an annual sum, payable quarterly, as the bishop of the diocese in which the benefice is situated shall direct; and it shall be lawful for the bishop to appoint to such bankrupt such or the like stipend as by law he might have appointed to a curate duly licensed to serve such benefice in case the bankrupt had been non-resident.

136. In case of any claim, dispute, or difference between the official assignee, the creditors' assignee, and the creditors, or any of such persons, or between any persons claiming under a trust deed, deed of composition or arrangement, relating to any bankrupt's or debtor's estate, or to any money or property claimed as part of the estate of any bankrupt or debtor, either party may apply to the court having jurisdiction in the bankruptcy, and in other cases to the court in London; and it shall be lawful for the court to determine the same, and to summon and examine upon oath the official or creditors' assignee, trustee, or any other person whomsoever, as to any matters and things concerning the bankruptcy or trust estate, and to direct such inquiries, and to give such directions, and make such orders relative thereto, as shall to the court seem just and expedient, and to award costs, personally or in any other manner, against the official or creditors' assignee, trustee, or any other person: provided that in all cases in which a resolution has been come to by a majority in number and value of the creditors assembled in a meeting, regard shall be had by the court to such resolution, and the same shall not be varied or set aside by the court unless such resolution shall, in the opinion of the court, be unjust or inequitable, and not fit to be binding and conclusive under this act.

137. At any time after the expiration of twelve months from adjudication, or at any earlier period with the approbation of the court, the assignees may sell by auction or tender, or, with the sanction of the court, by private contract, all or any of the book debts due or growing due to the bankrupt, and the books relating thereto, and the goodwill of his trade or business, and assign the same to the purchaser; and such purchaser shall, by virtue of the assignment, have power to sue in his own name for the debts assigned to him, as effectually, and with the same privileges concerning proof of the requisites of bankruptcy and other matters, as the assignee himself.

138. When the affairs of the bankrupt are fully wound up, the court may, subject to the directions of any general order, make from time to time such orders as in each case seem fit respecting the disposal or custody of any books, papers, or documents relating to property or affairs in the possession or under the control of the official assignee, the creditors' assignee, or any other person.

139. If the creditors' assignee shall wilfully fail to observe any of the directions herein contained, or shall be guilty of any neglect in the performance of his duty, or it shall be made to appear to the court, on the application of any two or more creditors, that it would be for the benefit of the estate that such creditors' assignee should not continue to have the management and administration of the bankrupt's estate, it shall be lawful for the court either to appoint an official assignee to act jointly with such creditors' assignee, or to remove such creditors' assignee, and direct a choice of another creditors' assignee, or to appoint an official assignee alone to wind up and administer the estate under the bankruptcy.

As to the last Examination.

140. The court shall, forthwith after the meeting for the choice of an assignee by the creditors, appoint a public sitting on a day not later than sixty days from the date of such meeting, and shall give notice of such sitting in the London Gazette, and in such newspapers as the court shall direct, for the bankrupt to pass his last examination, and also, unless the court shall in any case otherwise direct, to make application for his discharge; but the court shall have power to enlarge the time appointed for such sitting, or to adjourn the same.

141. The bankrupt shall prepare such statement of his accounts and in such form as general orders or as the court in any case shall direct, and shall subscribe such statement, and file the same in court ten days at least before the day appointed for the last examination, or adjournment thereof; and such statement may, before such last examination, be

143. In the preparation of such statement of his accounts the bankrupt shall be assisted by the official assignee, who shall prepare and file in court, together with such statement, a report upon the state of the affairs of the bankrupt, setting forth such facts and particulars as may be required by the court, or as it shall in the opinion of such assignee be important for the court to be informed of: provided that if it shall in any case appear to the court that there are special circumstances rendering it necessary that the bankrupt should be assisted in the preparation of such statement of accounts by some person other than such official assignee, the court may nominate some such person to assist the bankrupt in that behalf, and may allow to such person, out of the bankrupt's estate, such remuneration as to the court, upon the taxation of such person's bill of costs, shall seem just; and in such case the statement so prepared shall have appended thereto a certificate, signed by the person appointed to assist the bankrupt in the preparation thereof, expressing his approval or disapproval thereof, and the particulars and reasons of such disapproval.

As to Proof of Debts.

144. Every creditor of the bankrupt may, after adjudication, prove his debt, by delivering or sending through the general post, before the appointment of the creditors' assignee, to the official assignee, and after such appointment to the creditors' assignee, a statement of such debt, and of the account, if any, between the creditor and the bankrupt, together with a declaration, signed by the creditor, appended thereto, that such statement is a full, true, and complete statement of account between the creditor and the bankrupt, and that the debt thereby appearing to be due from the estate of the bankrupt to the creditor is justly due; and all bodies politic and public companies incorporated, or authorised to sue or bring actions, may prove by an agent, provided such agent shall in his declaration declare that he is such agent, and that he is authorised to make such proof; and such declaration, signed by such creditor and agent respectively as aforesaid, shall be in such form as general orders shall direct.

146. Every creditor of the bankrupt may also after adjudication prove his debt by deposition in court or in chambers, or before a registrar at any meeting of creditors elsewhere than in court, or by affidavit upon his own oath, or upon that of any clerk or other person in his employment: provided that where such deposition or affidavit shall be made by any other person than the creditor, the deponent shall, in his deposition or affidavit, set forth that he is duly authorised by his principal to make the deposition or affidavit, and that it is within his own knowledge that the debt was incurred, and for the consideration stated, and that to the best of his knowledge and belief the debt still remains unpaid and unsatisfied.

147. The official or creditors' assignee, as the case may be, shall examine all the statements of account aforesaid, and compare the same with the books, accounts, and other documents of the bankrupt, and shall from time to time make out a list of the creditors who have proved their debts, stating the amount and nature of such debts, which list shall be open to the inspection of any creditor who has proved under the estate.

148. A person entitled to enforce against the bankrupt payment of any money, costs, or expenses by process of contempt issuing out of any court, shall be entitled to come in as a creditor under the bankruptcy, and prove for the amount payable under the process, subject to such ascertaining of the amount as may be properly had by taxation or otherwise.

149. In all cases in which the bankrupt is liable to pay any rent or other payment falling due at fixed or stated periods, and the adjudication of bankruptcy shall happen at any time other than one of such fixed or stated periods, it shall be lawful for the person entitled to such rent or other payment to prove for a proportionate part thereof up to the day of the adjudication of bankruptcy, in such manner as if the said rent or payment grew due from day to day, and not at such fixed or stated periods as aforesaid.

151. If any bankrupt shall have contracted, before the filing of a petition for adjudication, any debt payable by way of instalments, the creditor may prove for the amount of such instalments remaining unpaid at the time of such petition.

152. If any debtor shall, at the time of adjudication, be liable upon any bill of exchange or promissory note in respect of distinct contracts, as member of two or more firms carrying on separate and distinct trades, and having distinct estates to be wound up in bankruptcy, or as a sole trader and also as the member of a firm, the circumstances that such firms are in whole or in part composed of the same individuals, or that the sole contractor is also one of the joint contractors, shall not prevent proof and receipt of dividend in respect of such distinct contracts against the estates respectively liable upon such contracts.

153. If any bankrupt shall at the time of adjudication be liable, by reason of any contract or promise, to a demand in the nature of damages, which have not been and cannot be otherwise liquidated or ascertained, it shall be lawful for the court, acting in prosecution of such bankruptcy, to direct such damages to be assessed by a jury, either before itself or in a court of law, and to give all necessary directions for such purpose; and the amount of damage, when assessed, shall be proveable as if a debt due at the time of the bankruptcy: provided that, in case all necessary parties agree, the court shall have power to assess such damages without the intervention of a jury or a reference to a court of law.

154. If any bankrupt shall at the time of adjudication be liable, by reason of any contract or promise, to pay premiums upon any policy of insurance, or any other sums of money, whether yearly or otherwise, or to repay to or indemnify any person against any such payments, the person entitled to the benefit of such contract or promise may, if he think fit, apply to the court to set a value upon his interest under such contract or promise, and the court is hereby required to ascertain the value thereof, and to admit such person to prove the amount so ascertained, and to receive dividends thereon.

155. The court may at any time expunge or reduce a proof of debt, on such application and such evidence as it shall think sufficient, and for that purpose may summon and examine upon oath or otherwise the person who has proved, and every person capable of giving evidence concerning the alleged debt, and may make such order as to the costs of any application as shall seem just.

156. The court, out of the estate and effects of the bankrupt, shall order payment of all such parochial rates as may be due from him at the time of his being adjudicated a bankrupt: provided such rates have become due during the twelve months immediately preceding the bankruptcy.

As to the Discharge of the Bankrupt.

157. From and after the commencement of this act all classification of certificates shall be abolished; and in every case where the discharge of a bankrupt shall be suspended, such discharge, when allowed, shall simply state the period for which it was suspended, and the reasons for such suspension; and if the bankrupt shall have been sentenced to imprisonment by any court under the provisions of this act, the discharge shall also set forth the fact of such sentence and the period of such imprisonment.

158. After the bankrupt has passed his last examination, unless an order of discharge shall have been previously made as hereinbefore provided, the court shall appoint a sitting for the purpose of considering the question of granting to the bankrupt such order. Fourteen days' notice of such sitting shall be given in the London Gazette and such newspapers as the court shall direct. The assignees, or any creditor who has proved, may be heard against such discharge.

159. In granting orders of discharge the following rules shall be observed:—

- (1). If, on the hearing of any application for an order of discharge, the assignees or any creditor shall allege, and if with or without such allegation the court shall be of opinion, that there is ground for charging the bankrupt with acts or conduct amounting to a misdemeanour under this act, the court shall, if the bankrupt consent thereto, direct a clear statement in writing of the charge to be delivered to the bankrupt, and shall appoint a day for trying the bankrupt on such charge, and, if the bankrupt require it, shall summon a jury for such purpose, and may direct the creditors' assignee, or the official assignee, or any of the creditors of the bankrupt, to act as prosecutor on such trial: provided always, that in every case of accusation against a bankrupt of acts amounting to a misdemeanour, it shall be competent to the court to direct that the bankrupt be indicted and prosecuted in one of the ordinary courts of criminal justice; and in all other cases the order of discharge shall take effect immediately from its date, subject to the appeal herein provided:
- (2). If on such trial by a jury, or by the commissioner alone, the bankrupt shall be convicted of any offence by this act made a misdemeanour, the commissioner shall, in addition to the punishment awarded for the offence, have power to direct that the order of discharge be either wholly refused or suspended during such time and upon such conditions as he shall think fit:
- (3). If the bankrupt shall not be accused of acts amounting to misdemeanour, or if he shall have been accused and acquitted, but in either case there shall be made, or shall appear to the court to exist, objection to the granting of an immediate discharge, the court shall proceed to consider the conduct of the bankrupt before and after adjudication, and the manner and circumstances in and under which his debts have been contracted; and if the court shall be of opinion that the bankrupt has carried on trade by means of fictitious capital, or that he could not have had at the time when any of his debts were contracted any reasonable or probable ground of expectation of being able to pay the same, or that, if a trader, he has, with intent to conceal the true state of his affairs, wilfully omitted to keep proper books of account, or, whether trader or not, that his insolvency is attributable to rash and hazardous speculation, or unjustifiable extravagance in living, or that he has put any of his creditors to unnecessary expense by frivolous or vexatious defence to any action or suit to recover any debt or money due from him, the court may either refuse an order of discharge, or may suspend the same from taking effect for such time as the court may think fit, or may grant an order of discharge subject to any condition or conditions touching any salary, pay, emoluments, profits, wages, earnings, or income which may afterwards become due to the bankrupt, and touching after-acquired property of the bankrupt, or may sentence the bankrupt to be imprisoned for any period of time not exceeding one year from the date of such sentence:

Provided always, that no person shall be liable by virtue of this act to any criminal proceeding or penalty in respect of any matter which may have occurred before the passing of this act to which he would not have been liable if this act had not passed.

160. With respect to all persons heretofore bankrupt, and whose certificates of conformity shall have been refused, it shall be lawful for the court, at any time after the expiration of three years from the time of and notwithstanding such refusal, to hear and determine the application of any such bankrupt for an order of discharge, and thereupon, if the court shall think fit, to grant an order of discharge, either absolute or subject to any condition or conditions, in the same manner as if the bankruptcy of such applicant had taken place after the commencement of this act.

161. The order of discharge shall, upon taking effect, discharge the bankrupt from all debts, claims, or demands proveable under his bankruptcy, save as herein otherwise provided; and if thereafter he shall be arrested or any action shall be brought against him for any such debt, claim, or demand, he shall be discharged upon entering an appearance, and may plead in general that the cause of action accrued before he became bankrupt, and may give this act and the special matter in evidence; and the order of discharge shall be sufficient evidence of the bankruptcy, and the proceedings precedent to the order of discharge.

162. If a bankrupt, after the order of discharge takes effect, be arrested or detained in custody for a debt, claim, or demand proveable under his bankruptcy, where judgment has been obtained before the order of discharge takes effect, the court, or a judge of a superior court of law, shall, on proof of the order of discharge, and unless there appear good reason to the contrary, direct the officer who has the bankrupt in custody to discharge him, which shall be done accordingly without fee.

163. The order of discharge shall not release or discharge any person who was a partner with the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy, or was then jointly bound, or had made any joint contract with him.

164. After the order of discharge takes effect, the bankrupt shall not be liable to pay or satisfy any debt, claim, or demand proveable under the bankruptcy, or any part thereof, on any contract, promise, or agreement, verbal or written, made after adjudication; and if he be sued on any such contract, promise, or agreement, he may plead in general that the cause of action accrued pending proceedings in bankruptcy, and may give this act and the special matter in evidence.

165. The order of discharge shall discharge the bankrupt from the effects of any process issuing out of any court for contempt of any court for non-payment of money or of costs or expenses in any court, and from all costs which he would be liable to pay in consequence of or on purging his contempt; and a bankrupt in custody under any such process as aforesaid shall, on obtaining an order of discharge, be entitled to be discharged from such custody forthwith.

166. Any contract, covenant, or security made or given by a bankrupt or other person, with, to, or in trust for any creditor, for securing the payment of any money as a consideration or with intent to persuade the creditor to forbear opposing the order for discharge, or to forbear to petition for a rehearing of or to appeal against the same, shall be void, and any money thereby secured or agreed to be paid shall not be recoverable, and the party sued on any such contract or security may plead in general that the cause of action accrued pending proceedings in bankruptcy, and may give this act and the special matter in evidence: provided always, that no such security, if a negotiable security, shall be void as against a bona fide holder thereof for value without notice of the consideration for which it was given.

167. If any creditor of a bankrupt shall obtain any sum of money, or any goods, chattels, or security for money, from any person as an inducement for forbearing to oppose, or for consenting to the allowance of the discharge of such bankrupt, or to forbear to petition for the recall of the same, every such creditor so offending shall forfeit and lose for every such offence the treble value or amount of such money, goods, chattels, or security so obtained.

168. The order of discharge, whether suspended or not, shall not be reviewed by the court, unless the court see good cause to believe that the order was obtained on false evidence, or by reason of the suppression of evidence, or otherwise fraudulently; in any of which cases the court may, if it think fit, upon the application of the bankrupt or of a creditor who has proved, and subject to such deposit for costs, and to such notice, by advertisement or otherwise, as the court shall think fit, grant a rehearing of the matter, and rehear it accordingly; and upon rehearing the court shall make such order as shall seem just, in like manner as it might upon an original hearing.

169. If on such rehearing the court shall annul or suspend the order of discharge, all persons having bonâ fide become creditors of the bankrupt between the time of the order originally taking effect and the time of its being annulled or suspended on rehearing shall, as against any property acquired by the bankrupt during the same period, and in priority to the original creditors, be admitted to prove and have dividends under the bankruptcy.

170. The order of discharge shall not be drawn up until after the expiration of the time allowed for appeal, or, if an appeal be brought, until after the decision of the court of appeal upon such appeal, and shall bear date either the day after the expiration of the time allowed for appeal, or the day of the decision of the court of appeal, as the case may require.

171. At any time within thirty days after any order of discharge shall have been allowed or refused, and subject to such order as to deposit of costs as general orders shall direct, any creditor of the bankrupt, or any creditors' assignee, or the bankrupt, may, if the order of discharge has been made or refused by any commissioner or county court judge, apply to the Court of Appeal in Chancery that such order of discharge may be granted, or recalled and delivered up to be cancelled; and such court may, on good cause shewn, order such order of discharge to be granted, or to be recalled and cancelled.

172. The order of discharge shall be in such form as general orders shall direct, and shall be under the hand of the commissioner and the seal of the court; and notice of the granting thereof shall be advertised in the London Gazette and two local papers.

As to Audit.

178. No public sittings of the courts shall be held for the sole purpose of auditing the accounts of the assignees, but such accounts shall be audited in such manner as is herein provided, or as general orders shall direct.

As to Dividend.

174. At the expiration of four months from the date of the adjudication of bankruptcy, or as much earlier as the court shall appoint, the creditors' assignee shall submit to a meeting of creditors, to be called for that purpose, and to be held before the registrar, of which meeting ten days' notice shall be given in the London Gazette and in two local newspapers, a statement of the whole estate of the bankrupt as then ascertained, of the property recovered, and of the property outstanding, specifying the cause of its being so outstanding, and of all the receipts, and of all payments thereout, made or to be made; and the official assignee shall, and any creditor who has proved may, attend and examine such statement, and compare the receipts with the payments; and upon ascertaining what balance is then in the Bank of England, or other bank, to the credit of the estate, the meeting shall, by resolution, declare whether any and what part of the net produce of the estate, after making a reasonable deduction for future contingencies, shall be divided amongst the creditors. At the same meeting, the majority in value of the creditors present shall determine whether any and what allowance shall be made to the bankrupt out of his estate, if he has obtained or shall obtain a discharge.

175. If, upon such examination, it shall appear that the creditors' assignee has kept in his hands, at any time during the space of one week, more than the sum of 50*l.* belonging to the estate, the creditors may, upon establishing such fact to the satisfaction of the court, and if the assignee shall not shew cause to the contrary, debit such assignee with interest for the amount so kept, at any rate not exceeding 20*l.* per centum by the year for the time such monies were kept in his hands.

176. In the calculation of a dividend it shall be imperative to make provision for debts which shall appear, from the bankrupt's balance-sheet, to be due to persons resident in places so distant from the court that, in the ordinary course of communication, they have not had sufficient time to tender their proofs, or to establish them if disputed; and also for debts the subject of claims not yet determined by the court.

177. In every case where joint and separate estates have to be administered, and where the court shall not otherwise direct, dividends of the joint and separate estates shall be declared at one and the same sitting, and notice of the time appointed for such dividends, when advertised, shall be given in one and the same advertisement; and the costs, charges, and expenses of and incident to the sitting shall be apportioned by the assignee between the joint and separate estates, as may appear to be fair and reasonable, having regard to the work done for, and the benefit received by, each estate; and a single fee, and no more, shall be payable to the solicitor to the estate in respect of the sitting.

178. Within ten days after such meeting, or within such further time as the court may allow, the official assignee shall prepare lists of creditors entitled to dividend, and shall calculate, and set opposite to the name of each creditor who has proved under the estate (subject to the provision herein contained as to dividends reserved), the dividend to which he is entitled out of the net produce of the estate so set apart for a dividend, and shall forward by post to every such creditor a statement of the dividend to which he is so entitled; and such dividends shall be paid at the Bank of England or otherwise, in such manner as general orders shall direct.

179. The like proceedings for the making up and auditing of the accounts of the estate, and the declaration and payment of a dividend, which are herein directed to be had at the expiration of four months from the adjudication of bankruptcy, shall be had at the successive expirations of every period of four months, or earlier, as the case may be, until the whole of the estate is divided amongst the creditors, and a dividend is declared to be final: provided that it shall be lawful for the majority in value of the creditors, at any such meeting as aforesaid, to postpone the period of declaring a dividend, or at any time, in declaring a second dividend, to declare also that such second dividend shall be final, unless any action at law or suit in equity be depending, or any part of the estate be standing out, not sold or disposed of, or unless some other estate or effects of the bankrupt shall afterwards come to the assignee, in which case he shall, as soon as may be, convert such estate and effects into money, and, within two months after the same shall be so converted, the same shall also be divided in manner aforesaid.

As to the Discharge of Creditors' Assignees.

180. The order for discharge shall operate to release the creditors' assignee from all claims and demands of the creditors, or of any person who might have proved under the bankruptcy, subject nevertheless to such conditions, if any, as shall be expressed in such order of discharge.

181. Every creditors' assignee shall, before his discharge, transmit to the official assignee a list of unclaimed dividends on the estate, and of all debts remaining due to the estate, under his hand, and shall pay all monies and other estate of the bankrupt then in his hands into the Bank of England, to the account of the accountant in bankruptcy, to the credit of the estate.

182. Where the creditors' assignee has obtained an order of discharge, the official assignee first appointed in the matter of the bankruptcy shall, as to any estate and effects of the bankrupt not realised at the time of such order of discharge, and as to all debts then remaining uncollected, and which shall not have been sold in manner herein provided, and as to any future acquired property of the bankrupt, if made liable to the creditors under the conditions of discharge, represent the estate in all respects as the sole assignee thereof, and shall have and exercise all the rights, duties, powers, and authorities conferred by this act upon official and creditors' assignees.

183. The accountant in bankruptcy shall, on the application of any assignee, give to him a certificate stating the amount and description of any sum of money, notes, bills, or other negotiable instruments which he may be desirous of paying into the Bank of England under the provisions herein contained; and on the production of such certificate the Governor and Company of the Bank of England shall receive the sum therein mentioned, and such bills, notes, or other negotiable instruments, and give a receipt for the same, and shall forthwith carry the same to the credit of the ac-accountant in bankruptcy; and every such certificate and receipt shall be given without fee or reward.

184. All unclaimed dividends, save dividends declared before the passing of this act, and all monies unclaimed, the produce of any bankrupt's estate, shall, after the expiration of the period of twelve months from the dividend having been declared, or from the time at which any other monies unclaimed shall have come to the hands of the assignees, be transferred to the credit of "the unclaimed dividend account," subject to the order of the court for the payment thereof of any dividend due to any creditor, or for the distribution of any such other unclaimed money; and the interest and profit arising from the said account shall from time to time be paid over to the account of the chief registrar.

As to Change from Bankruptcy to Arrangement.

185. At the first meeting of creditors held after adjudication in manner herein provided, or at any meeting to be called for the purpose, and of which ten days' notice shall have been given in the London Gazette, three-fourths in number and value of the creditors present or represented at such meeting may resolve that the estate ought to be wound up under a deed of arrangement, composition, or otherwise, and that an application shall be made to the court to stay proceedings in the bankruptcy for such period as the court shall think fit.

186. The registrar shall report such resolution to the court within four days from the date of such resolution; and the bankrupt, or any creditor nominated in that behalf by the meeting, may then apply to the court that the proceedings in bankruptcy may be stayed in the terms of such resolution; and the court, after hearing the bankrupt, and such creditors as may desire to be heard, for or against the resolution, and if it shall find that the resolution was duly carried, and that its terms are reasonable, and calculated to benefit the general body of the creditors under the estate, shall confirm the same, and make order accordingly, and in such order shall give such directions as to the interim management of the estate as it shall deem expedient.

187. If the proceedings in bankruptcy be stayed as herein provided, the bankrupt, or any creditor nominated in that behalf by the meeting aforesaid, may, at any time within the period during which the proceedings are so stayed, produce to the court a deed of arrangement, signed by or on behalf of three-fourths in number and value of all the creditors of the bankrupt; and the court may consider the same, and may examine on oath the bankrupt and any of the creditors who may desire to be heard in support of or in opposition to the deed, and may make such other inquiry as it may think necessary; and if the court shall be satisfied that the deed has been duly entered into and executed, and that its terms are reasonable, and calculated to benefit the general body of the creditors under the estate, it shall by order make a declaration of the complete execution of the deed, and shall direct the same to be registered with the chief registrar, and shall also, if it thinks fit, annul the bankruptcy; and such deed shall thereafter be as binding in all respects on any creditor who has not executed the deed as if he had executed it, provided such deed be registered with the chief registrar in manner directed by the order.

188. Either before or after such order the court shall have jurisdiction to entertain any application of the bankrupt, or of any party to the deed, or of any creditor or person claiming to be a creditor, respecting the disclosure, distribution, inspection, conduct, management, or winding up of the bankrupt's estate and affairs, or any act or thing relating thereto, or respecting the execution of any of the trusts or provisions of the deed, or the audit or examination of the accounts of a trustee or inspector, or the taxation or examination of the costs or charges of any attorney, solicitor, accountant, auctioneer, broker, or other person acting or employed under the deed, or generally for the decision of any dispute or question; and shall also have jurisdiction to entertain any application of any such person as aforesaid respecting any matter for the submission whereof to the court provision is made by the deed, or any matter arising between any of the said persons and any other person appearing and submitting to the jurisdiction of the court; and the court shall determine all questions arising under the deed according to the law and practice in bankruptcy, so far as they may be applicable, and, on entertaining any such application, shall have power to make all such orders as shall seem just, and to enforce all such orders as in bankruptcy.

189. The court shall have power, for the purpose of any application under these provisions, or for the better execution of any powers given to the court thereby, to summon, and to examine upon oath or otherwise, the bankrupt, and any party to the deed, and any creditor or person claiming to be a creditor, and any person known or suspected to have any of the estate in his possession, or any person supposed to be indebted to the estate, or whom the court may deem capable of giving any information material to the full disclosure of the debtor's transactions and affairs, or to the carrying into effect the provisions of the deed; and the court may exercise, as to the examination of such persons, and the production by them of such books, papers, deeds, or documents as it shall deem requisite, the same powers that are vested in the court with relation to the examination of persons and witnesses, and the production of books, papers, deeds, and documents, in matters of bankruptcy.

190. If the resolution aforesaid shall not be duly reported, or if the court shall refuse the application to stay proceedings, or if the deed of arrangement shall not be duly produced, or if upon its production the court shall not think fit to approve thereof, the bankruptcy shall proceed as though no such resolution had been passed; and the court may make all necessary orders for resuming the proceedings in bankruptcy, and the period of time which shall have elapsed between the date of such resolution and the date of the order for resuming proceedings shall not be reckoned in calculating periods of time prescribed by this act.

191. If the bankruptcy be annulled, as herein provided, the order annulling the same shall be filed with the proceedings, and notice thereof shall be given in the London Gazette.

As to Trust Deeds for the Benefit of Creditors, Composition and Inspectorship Deeds executed by a Debtor.

192. Every deed or instrument made or entered into between a debtor and his creditors, or any of them, or a trustee on their behalf, relating to the debts or liabilities of the debtor, and his release therefrom, or the distribution, inspection, management, and winding up of his estate, or any of such matters, shall be as valid and effectual and binding on all the creditors of such debtor as if they were parties to and had duly executed the same, provided the following conditions be observed; that is to say—

- (1). A majority in number, representing three-fourths in value, of the creditors of such debtor whose debts shall respectively amount to 10*l.* and upwards, shall, before or after the execution thereof by the debtor, in writing assent to or approve of such deed or instrument:
- (2). If a trustee or trustees be appointed by such deed or instrument, such trustee or trustees shall execute the same:
- (3). The execution of such deed or instrument by the debtor shall be attested by an attorney or solicitor:
- (4). Within twenty-eight days from the day of the execution of such deed or instrument by the debtor the same shall be produced, and left (having been first duly stamped) at the office of the chief registrar, for the purpose of being registered:
- (5). Together with such deed or instrument there shall be delivered to the chief registrar an affidavit by the debtor or some person able to depose thereto, or a certificate by the trustee or trustees, that a majority in number, representing three-fourths in value, of the creditors of the debtor whose debts amount to 10*l.* or upwards, have in writing assented to or approved of such deed or instrument, and also stating the amount in value of the property and credits of the debtor comprised in such deed:
- (6). Such deed or instrument shall, before registration, bear such ordinary and ad valorem stamp duties as are hereinafter provided:
- (7). Immediately on the execution thereof by the debtor, possession of all the property comprised therein, of which the debtor can give or order possession, shall be given to the trustees.

193. The date, names, and descriptions of the parties to every such deed or instrument, not including the creditors, together with a short statement of the nature and effect copy of such entry shall be published in the London Gazette within four days after the making of such entry.

194. Every deed, instrument, or agreement whatsoever, by which a debtor, not being a bankrupt, conveys, or covenants or agrees to convey, his estate and effects, or the principal part thereof, for the benefit of his creditors, or makes any arrangement or agreement with his creditors, or any person on their behalf, for the distribution, inspection, conduct, management, or winding up of his affairs or estate, or the release or discharge of such debtor from his debts or liabilities, shall, within twenty-eight days from and after the execution thereof by such debtor, or within such further time as the court in London shall allow, be registered in the Court of Bankruptcy, and in default thereof shall not be received in evidence.

195. No deed or instrument whatever required to be registered as aforesaid shall be registered, unless, in addition to the ordinary stamp duty, it also be impressed with or have affixed to it a stamp denoting a duty computed at the rate of 5s. upon every 100*l.*, or fraction of 100*l.*, of the sworn or certified value of the estate or effects comprised in, or to be collected or distributed under, such deed or instrument: provided, that the maximum of ad valorem duty payable in respect of any such deed or instrument shall be 200*l.*

196. Every such deed, on being so registered as aforesaid, shall have a memorandum thereof written on the face of such deed, stating the day and the hour of the day at which the same was brought into the office of the chief registrar for registration.

197. From and after the registration of every such deed or instrument in manner aforesaid, the debtor, and creditors, and trustees, parties to such deed, or who have assented thereto or are bound thereby, shall in all matters relating to the estate and effects of such debtor be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Bankruptcy, and shall respectively have the benefit of and be liable to all the provisions of this act, in the same or like manner as if the debtor had been adjudged a bankrupt, and the creditors had proved, and the trustees had been appointed creditors' assignees under such bankruptcy; and the existing or future trustees of any such deed or instrument, and the creditors under the same, shall, as between themselves respectively, and as between themselves and the debtor and against third persons, have the same powers, rights, and remedies, with respect to the debtor and his estate, and effects, and the collection and recovery of the same, as are possessed or may be used or exercised by assignees or creditors with respect to the bankrupt, or his acts, estate and effects in bankruptcy; and, except where the deed shall expressly provide otherwise, the court shall determine all questions arising under the deed according to the law and practice in bankruptcy, so far as they may be applicable, and shall have power to make and enforce all such orders as it would be authorised to do if the debtor in such deed had been adjudged bankrupt, and his estate were administered in bankruptcy.

198. After notice of the filing and registration of such deed has been given as aforesaid, no execution, sequestration, or other process against the debtor's property in respect of any debt, and no process against his person in respect of any debt, other than such process by writ or warrant as may be had against a debtor about to depart out of England, shall be available to any creditor or claimant without leave of the court; and a certificate of the filing and registration of such deed under the hand of the chief registrar and the seal of the court shall be available to the debtor for all purposes as a protection in bankruptcy.

199. In case any petition shall be presented for an adjudication in bankruptcy against a debtor after his execution of such deed or instrument as is hereinbefore described, and pending the time allowed for the registration of such deed or instrument, all proceedings under such petition may be stayed, if the court shall think fit; and in case such deed or instrument shall be duly registered as aforesaid, the petition shall be dismissed.

200. If a debtor cannot obtain the assent of a majority in number representing three-fourths in value of his creditors, by reason of his being unable to ascertain by whom bills of the consent of a majority in number representing three-fourths in value of all his other creditors to such deed or instrument as aforesaid: provided that notice shall have been inserted by or on behalf of the debtor in one or more newspapers published in the county or place at which he shall have carried on business immediately prior to the date of such deed or instrument, requiring his creditors to signify their assent to or dissent from such deed or instrument, by notice in writing addressed to the trustee or trustees thereof within fourteen days from the insertion of such notice, and that the affidavit or certificate of the trustee or trustees shall state the circumstances of the case, and the same shall be allowed by the court, and provided the deed or instrument be in such form as is expressed in Schedule (D.) to this act annexed, which shall vest all the estate and effects of the debtor in the trustees of such deed, and provided that all such other conditions as are hereinbefore required be duly complied with.

As to Notices and Advertisements.

201. All notices by this act or by general order required to be served on any person shall be sent by post addressed to the last known place of business or abode of such person, subject to such regulations as to registration and otherwise as such general orders shall direct: provided that this present clause shall not apply to or affect notices by this act or by any general order required to be personally served.

202. General orders respecting the form and contents of notices in the London Gazette and otherwise may provide for notices concerning more bankruptcies than one being comprised in one advertisement, and may fix the price to be paid to the printer of the London Gazette for advertisements, which price the said printer is hereby required to receive as such payment.

As to Evidence.

203. Any petition for adjudication, or arrangement, adjudication of bankruptcy, assignment, appointment of official or creditors' assignees, certificate, deposition, or other proceeding or order in bankruptcy, or under any of the provisions of this act, appearing to be sealed with the seal of any court under this act, or any writing purporting to be a copy of any such document, and purporting to be so sealed, shall at all times, and on behalf of all persons, and whether for the purposes of this act or otherwise, be admitted in all courts whatever as evidence of such documents respectively, and of such proceedings and orders having respectively taken place or been made, and be deemed respectively records of such court, without any further proof thereof; and no such copy shall be receivable in evidence unless the same appear to be so sealed, except where otherwise in this act specially provided.

204. All courts, judges, justices, and persons judicially acting, and other officers, shall take judicial notice of the signature of any commissioner or registrar of the courts, and of the seal of the courts, subscribed or attached to any judicial or official proceeding or document to be made or signed under the provisions of this act.

205. If any person shall forge the signature of any commissioner, registrar, or of the master or other officer of the court, or shall forge or counterfeit the seal of the courts, or knowingly concur in using any such forged or counterfeit signature or seal, for the purpose of authenticating any proceeding or document, or shall tender in evidence any such proceeding or document with a false or counterfeit signature of any such commissioner, registrar, master, or other officer, or a false or counterfeit seal of the court, subscribed or attached thereto, knowing such signature or seal to be false or counterfeit, every such person shall be guilty of felony, and shall be liable to the same punishment as any offender under the act of the session of Parliament of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113.

206. A copy of any petition filed in the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors in England, or in any court having jurisdiction for the relief of insolvent debtors, or in bankruptcy, in any of her Majesty's dominions, colonies, or dependencies, and of any vesting order, schedule, order of adjudication, or other proceedings, purporting to be signed by the officer in whose custody the same shall be, or his deputy, certifying the same to be a true copy of such petition, vesting order, schedule, order of adjudication, or other order or proceedings, and appearing to be sealed with the seal of such court, shall at all times be admitted under this act as sufficient evidence of the same, and of such proceedings respectively having taken place, without any other proof whatever given of the same.

Upon such application it shall not be necessary for the assignee, trustee, or other representative of the creditors of the person so declared bankrupt or insolvent as aforesaid to give proof of any act of bankruptcy or petitioning creditor's debt, or to produce any other evidence than a duly certified copy, under the seal of the court, of the order or adjudication by which such person was found or adjudged bankrupt or insolvent.

(1). If he shall not upon the day limited for his surrender, and before three of the clock of such day, or at the hour and upon the day allowed him for finishing his examination, after notice thereof in writing, to be served upon him personally, or left at his usual residence, surrender, and submit to be examined before such court from time to time:

- (2). If he shall not, upon his examination, fully and truly discover, to the best of his knowledge and belief, all his property, real and personal, inclusive of his rights and credits, and how and to whom, and for what consideration, and when he disposed of, assigned, or transferred any part thereof, except such part as has been really and bona fide before sold or disposed of in the way of his trade or business, if any, or laid out in the ordinary expense of his family, or shall not deliver up to the court, or dispose, as the court directs, of all such part thereof, as is in his possession, custody, or power, except the necessary wearing apparel of himself, his wife, and children; and deliver up to the court all books, papers, and writings in his possession, custody, or power, relating to his property or affairs:
- (3). If he shall, after adjudication, or within sixty days prior to adjudication, with intent to defraud his creditors, remove, conceal, or embezzle any part of his property to the value of 10*l.* or upwards:
- (4). If, in case of any person having, to his knowledge or belief, proved a false debt under his bankruptcy, he shall fail to disclose the same to his assignees within one month after coming to the knowledge or belief thereof:
- (5). If he shall, with intent to defraud, wilfully and fraudulently omit from his schedule any effects or property whatsoever:
- (6). If he shall, after the filing of the petition for adjudication, with intent to conceal the state of his affairs, or to defeat the object of the law of bankruptcy, conceal, prevent, or withhold the production of any book, deed, paper, or writing relating to his property, dealings, or affairs:
- (7). If he shall, after the filing of the petition for adjudication, or within three months next before adjudication, with intent to conceal the state of his affairs, or to defeat the objects of the law of bankruptcy, part with, conceal, destroy, alter, mutilate, or falsify, or cause to be concealed, destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified, any book, paper, writing, or security, or document relating to his property, trade, dealings, or affairs, or make, or be privy to the making, of any false or fraudulent entry or statement in or omission from any book, paper, document, or writing relating thereto:
- (8). If, within the like time, he shall, knowing that he is at the time unable to meet his engagements, fraudulently, and with intent to diminish the sum to be divided amongst the general body of his creditors, have made away with, mortgaged, incumbered, or charged any part of his property, of what kind soever, or if after adjudication he shall conceal from the court or his assignee any debt due to or from him:
- (9). If, being a trader, he shall, under his bankruptcy, or at any meeting of his creditors within three months next preceding the filing of the petition for adjudication, have attempted to account for any of his property by fictitious losses or expenses:
- (10). If, being a trader, he shall, within three months next before the filing of the petition for adjudication, under the false colour and pretence of carrying on business and dealing in the ordinary course of trade, have obtained on credit from any person any goods or chattels with intent to defraud:
- (11). If, being a trader, he shall, with intent to defraud his creditors, within three months next before the filing of the petition for adjudication, pawn, pledge, or dispose of, otherwise than by bona fide transactions in the ordinary way of his trade, any of his goods or chattels which have been obtained on credit, and remain unpaid for.

222. If it shall at any time appear to any court under this act that the bankrupt has been guilty of any of the offences in the next preceding section set forth, such court shall have and may exercise such jurisdiction, rights, powers, and privileges for the summoning, apprehending, committing, remanding, bailing, and otherwise proceeding in respect of such bankrupt, as are exercised by and vested in her Majesty's justices of the peace in respect of persons against whom a charge or complaint shall have been made before any one or more of the said justices in respect of any felony or indictable misdemeanour committed within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justices or justices; and all the provisions of the act of the session of Parliament of the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, shall, with such variations as the nature of the case may require, extend and apply to the court, and to the commissioners of the London and other district courts of bankruptcy, and to the judges of the county courts acting in matters under this act, and their proceedings, as well as to justices of the peace and their proceedings.

223. The court may direct that the creditors' assignee, or, if there be no creditors' assignee, the official assignee, or any of the creditors of the bankrupt, shall act as the prosecutor in respect of such offence, and shall give to such assignee or creditor a certificate of the court having so directed, which certificate shall be deemed sufficient proof of such prosecution having been directed as aforesaid; and upon the production of such certificate, the costs of such prosecution shall be allowed by the court before which any person shall be prosecuted or tried in pursuance of such direction, unless such last-mentioned court shall specially otherwise direct; and when allowed by any such court, such sum so allowed shall be ordered by the said court to be paid and borne, in all respects, in the same manner as the expenses of prosecutions for felonies are now paid and borne, and the same shall be paid and borne accordingly; and any expenses incurred by such prosecutor, other than those so defrayed in accordance with the next following clause, shall be paid out of the account intitled "The Chief Registrar's Account."

224. The court may direct the assignees to lay the papers before the Attorney-General (or the Solicitor-General during a vacancy in the office of Attorney-General) for his direction thereon, either while the bankruptcy is pending before the court, or when it has been brought to a conclusion.

225. In any indictment or information for any misdemeanour under this act it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence charged, without alleging or setting forth any debt, act of bankruptcy, petition, or adjudication, or any summons, warrant, order, rule, or proceeding of or in any court acting under this act.

Miscellaneous Clauses.

226. If any person shall wilfully disobey any rule or order of the court duly made for enforcing any of the purposes and provisions of this act, the court may, by warrant in the form contained in the Schedule (F.) to this act annexed, commit the person so offending to the Queen's Prison, or to the common gaol of any county, city, or place where he shall be found, or where he shall usually reside, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, until such court, or the Court of Appeal in Chancery sitting in bankruptcy, shall make order to the contrary.

227. All sums of money forfeited under this act, or by virtue of any conviction for perjury committed in any oath, affirmation, or declaration thereby directed or authorised, may be sued for by the creditors' assignee or trustee, or such other person as the court shall by order direct, in any of her Majesty's superior courts of record.
